By WENDY HANSCOM

Two Newry men who bulldozed part of Great Brook this summer will be asked to pay a fine, but will not be required to plow the disturbed rocks back into the brook bed, according to a Department of Environmental Protection official.

DEP enforcement officer Greg Beane met at the Newry site Thursday with representatives from the Inland Fisheries and Wildlife Department, Maine Department of Transportation and state Rep. Al Barth.

Beane looked over the area with the various officials and Robert Lowell and Ed Bennett, who have admitted doing the illegal bulldozing earlier this summer.

"What I decided from all the comments was that it was unreasonable to put the rocks back," Beane said.

His decision was mainly influenced by a fisheries biologist who said the dredging would not significantly affect the brook's fish population, Beane said.

"He didn't seem real worried about it," Beane said. "Flash brooks like this one--brooks that have high velocity runoffs at times--move the material in the brook around quite a bit anyway."

Lowell told The Citizen in September that he had the 84-foot stretch of rocks pushed onto the brook's bank to keep Great Brook in its bed. The brook routinely runs over its bank and floods a section of Route 26 in the spring.

DOT engineers at the scene last week said putting the rocks into the brook bed and then bringing in rip-rap to control the water might make the brook's channel even narrower than before the bulldozing, Beane said.

"It would be kind of like spitting into the wind," Beane said.

The DEP will draw up new consent agreements that will ask Lowell and Bennett to admit their guilt and agree to paying a fine, Beane said.

The fine amounts are not public information unless the agreements are signed and approved by the Board of Environmental Protection, he said.

Drug dogs search Telstar After teacher nabs student with coke in parking lot; but no further drugs found in lockers

By WENDY HANSCOM

Drug-sniffing police dogs were used to search Telstar High School last week after school officials say a student was spotted in the school's parking lot with a small amount of cocaine.

A teacher patrolling the school's parking lot early last Tuesday spotted a student acting suspiciously and then approached the student who had what appeared to be a drug, according to Superintendent Ronald Jenkins.

The substance was sent to the Oxford County Sheriff's office and identified as cocaine, according to Sheriff Lloyd "Skip" Herrick.

The student, whose age or sex is not being disclosed, was suspended, Jenkins said. The length of the student's suspension was also not disclosed, but Jenkins said it was "within school policy and almost standard for drug-related instances."

"A typical suspension is five to ten days," he said.

Information on the incident was referred to the Department of Probation and Parole. Juvenile intake officer Lee Cater will decide if charges will be filed against the student.

After the incident, Jenkins met

Comprehensive planning: Bethel seeking a few good women

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Bethel Planning Board is wondering why more people, especially women, have not applied to serve on the town's comprehensive planning committee.

Ten applicants answered a recent call for volunteers, but only one of the would-be planners is a woman.

At its meeting earlier this month, planner Stan Howe noted the gender mismatch and suggested the board seek out more female candidates. Fellow planner Don Feeney agreed but pointed out that women are frequently under-represented on town committees.

"Some people just like to be asked," replied planning assistant Nancy Schlieper.

She also suggested that perhaps the people who voted, at a special town meeting in June, against accepting a state planning grant might be willing to shoulder the burden.

The board is "really anxious to get going on this," said chairman Frank Vogt. "but we want to be sure we have good distribution and representation--including from the female part of the universe."

Board members subsequently compiled a list of other possible candidates, including a number of women, who might be convinced to volunteer.

The planners are scheduled to take up the matter again at their meeting tonight (Oct. 27). Vogt urged any others who would like to serve to fill out an application, available at the town office.

But Greenwood throws in the towel

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Greenwood Comprehensive Planning Committee has voted to disband.

The vote came as the result of declining participation, and an acknowledgement by the few remaining members that other commitments made it unlikely they would be able to put the necessary time and energy into the project.

Greenwood is not mandated to have a comprehensive plan until 2003, but even before that date the lack of a plan could still cost the town money, according to committee co-chairman Raymond Seames. Certain state funds and reimbursements are conditional on a town having an approved plan, he explained.

At this year's annual Town Meeting voters agreed to accept a state grant of approximately $14,000 to work on the comprehensive plan. But with the grant came a requirement that a draft plan be produced within 18 months.

At its last meeting the committee conceded that it had little realistic chance of putting together a quality plan by that deadline.

But the town will not have to return any state money, according to selectman Marie Bartlett. "We decided not to cash the check until we were sure we'd be able to put together a plan," she said.

Bartlett said she was later told by a state planning official that the town had "made the wise choice," in abandoning the project rather than doing a slipshod job.

GRACIOUS IN DEFEAT--The Telstar High School field hockey team was all smiles as it congratulated Sacopee Valley for the 1-0 win over the Rebels Friday in the Western Maine Class C playoffs. But for most of the game the girls wore long faces as repeated Rebel aggressive scoring attempts were turned back by the Sacopee defense. ## Playoffs end quickly

Girls fall 1-0 to Sacopee

By WENDY HANSCOM

It was a frustrating experience for Telstar High School fans to watch the school's field hockey team control the tempo and play of last week's Western Maine State Class C playoff game but fail to score on several strong attempts.

Before a large home crowd, the girls lost 1-0 to Sacopee Valley in Friday's quarterfinal playoff game. "It all comes down to who scores," said Coach Sally Hannon. "Sacopee had one corner and one shot on goal, that's all there was (for them)."

Telstar controlled the field most of the first half, but one of Sacopee's few forays into Rebel territory netted them a penalty corner and ultimately a goal.

Freshman goaltender Jessie Wight said she had no chance to get to the Sacopee shot.

"It was a hard drive off the top of the circle," Wight said, "and it bounced off the post and went in."

Telstar consistently penetrated Sacopee's circle throughout the rest of the game, but all Rebel shots were turned back by Sacopee's defense or went wide of the goal.

"We just didn't get the shots," junior Amy Lynn Patten said. "We just weren't accurate with our own shots. It just takes that one shot."

"We needed a goal and we just didn't get it," agreed Patten's teammate, senior Cheri Myers. "We outshot them by 10 to 1. It just didn't go in. We had nine

Carrabec tops boys 2-1

By WENDY HANSCOM

The Telstar High School soccer team finished a strong season with a 2-1 playoff loss Saturday to Carrabec.

The Rebels started Saturday's Western Maine State Class C boys' quarterfinal game in control of the play, but faded midway through the first half.

Nate Harvey put the fifth-seeded Rebels on the board first, scoring off an assist from Tim Remington with 25:48 left in the first half.

But the Cobras struck back eight minutes later to tie it one-all.

"We cleared it out once," goaltender Todd Wing said, "but they got it back in."

Carrabec scored again with 13:06 left to play in the second half. While Telstar's defense kept turning back the Cobras in the final minutes of the game, the Rebel offense failed to get a clear shot at the goal.

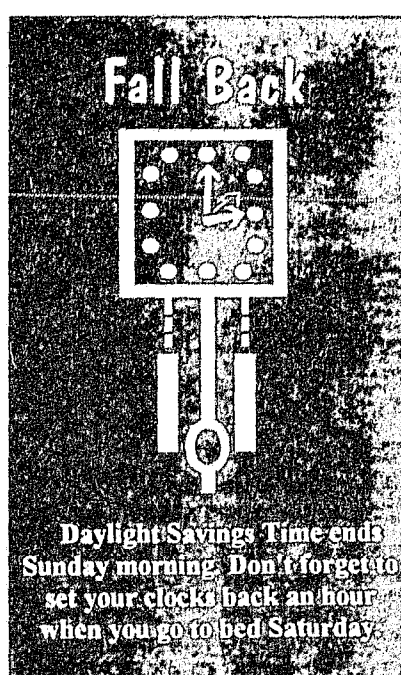

"There wasn't too much room for passes on the offense," senior Rob Greenwell said. "They always seemed to have their foot on the ball."

Wing logged two saves, Carrabec four. The Rebel defense fended off 12 Cobra shots on goal.

"The defense did well," said senior Sean Gilson. "We pressured them, but misplayed the ball and didn't get many shots."

This was the last high school soccer game for five Rebel seniors.

Greenwood Voters asked to OK new plow truck Or prepare to do a lot of shoveling

By WENDY HANSCOM

If the snow piles up within the next month or so, Greenwood's road crew may have trouble responding speedily to outlying areas.

But officials are hoping the town will vote on Nov. 9 to purchase a new plow truck to replace an old truck that's given up the ghost.

"Our old plow is no longer road-worthy," Selectman Marie Bartlett said. "We can't even register it. Right now we have two plows and a small pickup to do our winter plowing. All our equipment is old, and this truck just went beyond the point of no return. It would cost more to make it road-worthy than it was valued."

At a special town meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 9, selectmen will ask voters to spend $53,000 to purchase

Dad, 2 boys fight to stay in SAD44

By WENDY HANSCOM

Glen Dakin of Locke Mills has run out of luck and is running out of time to provide a winter home for his sons Josh and Joel.

Dakin and his family were evicted from their rented Mt. Abram village home in June, he said. He and his wife spent the summer living in a tent in Locke Mills, while the two boys stayed in Winthrop at their grandmothers' homes.

Two months ago, Dakin said, his wife left him and also left him in charge of caring for their eighth- and tenth-grade sons.

Once school started, eighth-grader Josh and tenth-grader Joel returned to SAD44 and began bouncing around, spending nights at friends' houses, Dakin said. They go to their grandmothers' houses in Winthrop on the weekends to wash their clothes and prepare for another week of being homeless, he said.

Dakin has been unemployed since he was laidoff from his lift supervisor job at Mt. Abram in April, and now his unemployment checks have run out, Dakin said. He's waiting to find out if he will be rehired at Mt. Abram and has applied for other jobs in the area.

But for now, he feeds himself and the boys on $240 a month worth of food stamps.

Dakin said he is worried that if he can't put a permanent roof over the boys' heads soon, the state will put them in foster care or he'll have to take them out of the SAD44 area--something he and the boys are adamantly opposed to.

"I'm really worried about the state taking them," Dakin said. "I know they'd rather go to Winthrop than do that."

Dakin's been offered a chance to stay at the Chisholm House in Rumford, but the boys would have to change schools.

"A lot of it has to do with their school friends," Dakin said. "They don't want to leave what they've built up here. They're well respected among their friends. I don't think they want to lose that. About all they have left is their friends. Moving out of this area, with everything that's happened this summer, would pretty much wreck them. It's hard for them now, but so far they're standing up pretty well."

Joel is active in Telstar's math club, drama club, on the track team and is trying to form a school golf club, his father said. He's also a class officer, according to Telstar Principal Theodore Davis.

No to Amateur Hour in Augusta

Maine voters are celebrated for their independence—we hope that on Tuesday they demonstrate that spirit by refusing to join the mob of states clambering aboard the term-limits bandwagon.

The term-limits initiative would limit to eight years the time state legislators or constitutional officers could serve. After that deadline they would have to sit out a term or seek another office.

Sponsors claim the initiative will bring "new energy" and "fresh ideas" to Augusta, but with a turnover rate that already ranks among the six highest in the country, it is hard to believe the legislature is really that lacking in either.

And "new energy" and "fresh ideas," while fine in themselves, will count for very little when faced with the realpolitik of the bureaucrats, lobbyists and corporate lawyers prowling the halls of Augusta.

Without the stabilizing element of an experienced, if imperfect, leadership, the new legislators will be green manure for seasoned special-interest players whose motivations are anything but the good of the people, or the state, of Maine.

The bureaucrats, lobbyists and corporate lawyers know the value of experience and political savvy—none of them are volunteering to accept term limits on their own activities.

When you cut to the chase, it's obvious that term-limit supporters are simply trying to win by sleight of hand the political power they have been unable to win in year after year of legislative elections. And to do that they are cynically attempting to tap the deep vein of resentment and negativity that has come to dominate our political atmosphere—especially when economic times are hard.

Sadly, they stand a very good chance of succeeding. But think hard before you go into the polling booth Tuesday and hand over your hard-won right to vote for the person you think is best for the job.

And speaking of our state Legislature and other functional but far-from-perfect social arrangements, we recommend a yes vote on Referendum Question Six, to approve the interstate pact to send low-level radioactive waste to Texas for disposal.

The stuff is real, it's poison, and we can't make it disappear by thinking pure thoughts. In the absence of a better alternative, sending it to Texas is a reasonable solution to a problem that admits no perfect solution.

*****

Other questions before voters Tuesday include:

--A constitutional amendment to protect state parks or other designated conservation or recreational land by requiring 2/3 vote of the Legislature to reduce the land or change its purpose.

--A $5 million bond issue to provide funds for the closure and remediation of municipal solid waste landfills.

--A $39.5 million bond issue for improvements to highways, state and local bridges, airports, cargo ports and ferry service (with up to $125.5 in matching federal funds).

--A $15.1 bond issue for the construction of water pollution control facilities (with a $20 million federal match).

Aside from two small road and bridge reconstruction projects (Cross Street repairs or relocation--$540,000; Pleasant River Bridge reconstruction--$200,000), none of the dollars from the three bond issues are specifically targeted at projects in the Bethel area, but for the state as a whole the bond issues represent legitimate investments in infrastructure and environment.

We recommend a yes vote.

DON'T WASTE MONEY ON FILTERS

To the Editor:

The Bethel Water District is very pleased to have been selected as the best tasting disinfected water at the Taste Test held by the Maine Rural Water Association in Rockland on Oct. 19.

The results were widely reported on TV and radio, as well as the newspaper coverage which included the Portland Press Herald and Bangor Daily News.

While taste has been the most common reason to select a water, at the Federal level, there have been many questions about the safety of water. These have resulted in many more tests being required to confirm the safety of public water supplies.

Typically, the tests recently added to the required list will cost a small system such as Bethel about $1,500 for each source the system uses. Because the Bethel and West Bethel water systems each have their own source, two sets of tests have been required.

Bethel's water was in all cases much better than the required standard. West Bethel's is also much better than required in all tests results received. The district is still awaiting results of two tests from West Bethel; these are both expected to be satisfactory.

Many additional tests are done on the water to assure that consistent quality is maintained. Taken together, these tests cover more than 100 items.

This testing and the district's source protection establish that the district's customers receive water that is among the safest and best tasting anywhere.

A number of water customers have reported phone solicitations for water filtering systems. These salesmen have suggested that their filters are needed to make the water safe. This is clearly not true.

Anyone who might have questions about the water is invited to contact Don Katlin or me at the Bethel Water District, telephone 824-2342. If you need further assistance, the Maine Department of Human Services, Drinking Water Program can also answer questions about water. Their telephone number in Augusta is 287-2070.

YES TO LIMITS AND WASTE PACT

To the Editor:

There are two issues at stake on next Tuesday's ballot that I hope will pass overwhelmingly: term limits and the Texas compact for low level nuclear waste.

Limiting terms of state Legislators has the potential to return our government to a truly part-time citizens' legislature. Yes, it is true that every two years there is a high percentage (30 to 43 percent in the House and Senate last year) of turnover. However, much of this comes from voluntary retirement, not at the polls. Veteran legislators, who get reelected term after term and by seniority, dominate the system. There are many people on both sides of the aisle who are frustrated by their lack of opportunity to work for real change and to be placed on committees where their expertise can best be used. Opponents of term limits tell us we just have to vote change. Would the people of Eagle Lake elect someone other than John Martin? Given the area's fine roads and other projects, they would be crazy to not reelect him if he chooses to run again in 1994. What the rest of Maine thinks about the Speaker of the House doesn't count. Term limits will allow more people the opportunity to serve. If someone is effective and wants to continue in politics then she/he can always run for another office after four terms or sit on the sidelines for two years before running again. Opponents also say that the lobbyists will dominate the process if term limits passes. Any legislator who allows a lobbyist to dominate them shouldn't even be in Augusta. We don't need "veteran" legislators, we need intelligent legislators who do not represent "special interest" groups and who can speak for the good of all Maine people. Vote yes on Question One.

Item 6 on the November ballot is the citizens' chance to vote to send the low-level nuclear waste generated at Maine Yankee, the Kittery Naval Shipyard, Jackson Laboratory, and many hospitals, industrial, and university research facilities to a storage/disposal site in western Texas. Current Maine law virtually eliminates having any such storage/disposal facility built in Maine, so it is imperative that this question pass so that these wastes are disposed of properly. The geology, hydrology, and remote location of the Texas site are far superior to any such site in Maine, even if one could be found. The costs involved in packaging and transporting this material to Texas will be paid by the generators of the material not the taxpayers. Please vote yes on Question Six.

PLAYGROUND ASSEMBLY TIME

To the Editor:

The day many of us have been waiting for has finally arrived. The Bethel Area Playground Committee will be organizing the building of Phase I of our playground. The preschool playground will be located at Davis Park on Route 2 in Bethel.

We will be meeting Sunday morning, Halloween Day, at 9 a.m. on site at Davis Park. A supervisor contracted by Children's Playgrounds will be on site to direct folks how to put together the structure. Simultaneously a fence will be put up around the playground area due to the heavy traffic on Route 26 and the Androscoggin River located just behind the playground.

We are all very excited about seeing the results of a year's worth of labor, meetings, soliciting and phone calls. Of course, all of this will resume after Halloween Day in order to build Phase II in the spring.

We look forward to seeing people at the playground on Sunday. Anyone who would like to help please contact Maire Keane at 824-2608 or Marie Baker at 824-2213. We would appreciate knowing in advance if you are going to help so we can organize and provide enough refreshments and coffee. If anyone would like to drop by and just watch how it's done you're more than welcome. We won't be able to invite the preschoolers to play on the equipment until Thursday, Nov. 4, as the cement will need to set. There is a small group of moms with preschoolers who would like to invite you to join us that Thursday around 9:30 (weather permitting) to play. Hope to see lots of folks there.

SAFER FAMILIES PROGRAM

To the Editor:

Thursday morning I had the pleasure of having breakfast with an entire dining room full of Bethel area women. The occasion was a fund-raiser for the Safer Families Program at the Sudbury Inn. Although I thought I was informed on this issue, I can honestly say my consciousness has been raised. A wonderful woman named Lois Reckitt from the Portland Family Crisis Shelter spoke to us about family violence. I was stunned to learn that it was not until the early 1970s that this issue came to public attention, or was ever written about. Prior to that time no efforts at all were made to address this widespread problem.

I was also struck by how invisible a problem like family violence can be in a community. The Safer Families Program is currently working with large numbers (20-30 new cases per month) of family violence survivors in our community. It provides "safe houses" in the greater Bethel area where victims are housed and counseled. I was gratified to learn that the state of Maine is ahead of many others in terms of awareness and legislation regarding family violence. I am also keenly aware of how far we still need to go as a state and a nation in addressing our numbness, ignorance and minimizing about family violence and how it contaminates our entire society.

As a teacher, I have seen the impact of family violence on children. Lack of self-esteem, learning difficulties, emotional, psychological and spiritual damage are the legacies of abuse. It is heartening that these brave individuals are finding the courage to stand up, break the code of silence and get help. They are showing their children that physical and emotional abuse are no longer considered to be "just the way things are." We are very lucky that the Safer Families Program, with a telephone hotline, exists in our community, and we need to support it in any way we can. How many of our lives would have been different if support like this had existed in the '50s and '60s?

Police officer saves choking victim; Gould student harassed

(The police log has been unavailable for the past two weeks, while Police Chief Dale Bellman completed a "Supervision of Police Personnel" course at the Maine Criminal Justice Academy in Waterville.)

Friday evening a Gould Academy employee reported to police that a female student had reported that four men, apparently intoxicated, in a red pick-up truck were harassing pedestrians. The truck was reported as parked in back of the IGA. Police investigated, but did not find the vehicle.

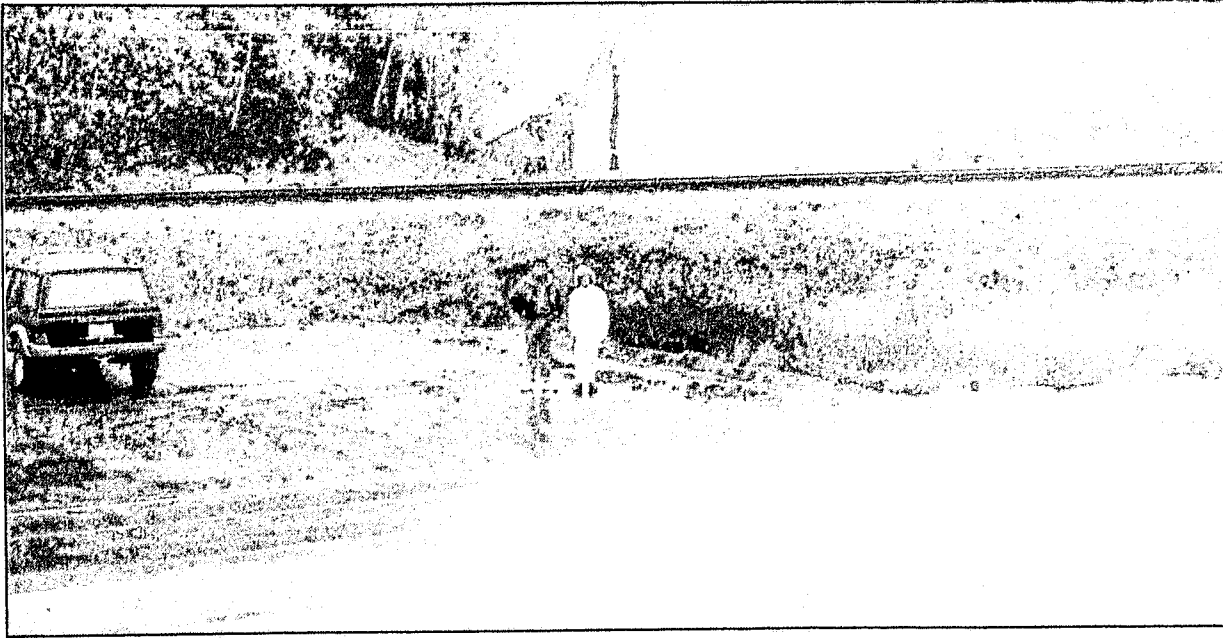

On Oct. 9, Bethel officer Tim Chapman reports being approached while he was at the office by a woman who indicated she was choking. Chapman noted in his report the women seemed to be turning blue and barely breathing. Chapman performed the Heimlich maneuver and the women coughed up something, according to the report. The Bethel Emergency Rescue Service was called to check out the woman, and transported her home.

Thursday, two juveniles were told to stop riding ATVs in the airport parking lot.

Also on Thursday, a Mechanic Street resident reported that a "lawn jockey" yard decoration, a three-foot statue of black man in red jockey clothes, had been stolen from his front lawn.

On Oct. 8, a Brown's Mobile employee reported that a passing machine clearing brush from the railroad tracks had thrown a rock through one of the store's windows. Police advised that the store should submit a bill to the St. Lawrence and Atlantic Railroad Co.

On Oct. 6, a Mason Street woman reported that a total of $600 dollars had been stolen from three cars parked in her driveway.

LOW-PROFILE STRUCTURE—Rick and Cheryl Breaux stand on the "structure" that the town Planning Board is scheduled to review next week. Rick Breaux said he had made a conscientious effort to work with town officials while building up his restaurant business in Bryant Pond Village. "But I never thought I'd have to go to the Planning Board to get permission to pave an already existing parking lot," he said. Planning Board Chairman Margaret Hand called him after the parking lot was paved, he said, to demand that he submit an application and observe the town's 10-foot setback requirement. "And I guess that means I have to be set back 10-feet from the state's land too—Route 26," Breaux said.

Gilbert workers accept contract

Gilbert Manufacturing union workers voted Sunday evening to accept a contract that includes an insurance cutback and a small wage increase over the next three years according to a Local 77 union official.

The three-year contract was approved by a vote of 34-19, according to local International Union of Electrical Workers' vice-president Randy Chase of West Paris.

The contract includes a boost in insurance deductible from $250 to $750 per year, Chase said.

But the company will lower the workers' weekly insurance pay-check deduction from $10 to $5, he said.

Union workers will get no raise in the contract's first year, but they will receive an addition of 10 cents the second year and 20 cents the third year, he said.

The federal negotiator called in to mediate the contract talks helped both Gilbert management and union officials reach an agreement, Chase said.

soccer team this fall, Dakin said.

Community Concepts of South Paris helped Dakin get a Section-8 program voucher from the state. The voucher guarantees that the state will pay up to $440 a month in rent for the family, he said.

But the only low-income housing project in the area is full, Dakin said, and without a telephone or transportation he's having trouble finding a rent in the SAD44 area.

Dakin's been staying off and on with friends Steve Vermette and Darci Daniels.

"The boys have been in school here for quite awhile," Daniels said, "and I can't blame them for wanting to stay. It's hard to be taken away from what you know. We're all shocked it's come to this."

In a letter to the editor in last week's Bethel Citizen, Dakin appealed to SAD44-area landlords to come forward with possible rents. In the letter he listed Daniels' phone number as a contact.

"We've gotten about a dozen calls," Daniels said late last week. "People offering whatever help they can or odd jobs."

But no one has called with news of an available rent, she said.

Joel Dakin said he's disappointed that the family can't find housing.

"I'm frustrated that we can't get a place," Joel said. "Everyone's turning their back because they say we've got a bad reputation in the past. Most of the houses we've been in we got kicked out. My parents together were not good at dealing with money. It's changed now. We're trying to deal with our problems. My Dad's much more responsible now. We deal with our money differently. We're trying to turn our lives around, and I wish people would realize that."

In the meantime the boys will probably continue to spend week nights at various friends' houses and weekends in Winthrop.

Dakin also spends most week nights staying with friends, but still sometimes sleeps in the tent on weekends.

"My friends have been great," he said, "but I need to give them a break too."

Bethel Planning Board

Stage, studio, subdivision on agenda

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Bethel Planning Board is expected to consider tonight a proposed new dance studio on Spring Street, a subdivision on Goss Pond, and the Sunday River Brewing Company's after-the-fact application to construct a concert stage behind the Route 2 restaurant.

The restaurant's application has been the subject of two public hearings, at which neighbors expressed concern about noise from the concerts.

A final vote on the matter is expected tonight.

Dance studio

Also on the agenda for tonight's meeting is Sue Farrar's application to build a 40-by-28 foot dance studio behind her house on Spring Street.

Farrar, who has been teaching dance in Bethel for almost 40 years, has been looking for a studio since a Main Street fire destroyed her rented studio last December.

"I've been burned out twice and sold out once," she said. "I hope this passes."

Farrar said that if Planning Board approval is granted, work on the new studio could start as early as this week.

Subdivision

At a meeting earlier this month the Bethel Planning Board also reviewed plans for Carl Hansen's proposed Egypt Mountain Subdivision on Goss Pond.

Goss Pond is located off the East Bethel Road. At 6.7 acres, it is the largest body of water entirely within Bethel's town lines.

Hansen's plan calls for siting four two-acre lots on the south shore of the pond, in addition to the two he has already sold on the north side.

Hansen told the planners that because of the rough terrain in the area it is unlikely that further lots could be carved out of parcel, which totals approximately 12 acres.

At the earlier meeting, the Planning Board asked Hansen to return with a more detailed contour map, a erosion control plan, the required fees and more information regarding the covenants on the two original lots.

Hansen is on the agenda again for tonight's meeting.

Bethel Code Enforcement Officer Norm Putnam said a study of the floodplain in the areas would also be needed.

Since Goss Pond is less than 10 acres in size, it is not covered by the state's Great Ponds Act. But Hansen said he had written covenants into the subdivision deeds prohibiting construction within 100 feet of the shoreline.

a new truck, truck body and plow equipment.

To pay for the plow, selectmen will ask voters to take $26,033.94 from the equipment reserve account and $26,847.94 from the recent sale of town-owned property.

"We're not raising any money," Bartlett said. "We're still in the process of selling off town property and issuing quit claim deeds, but we've asked them all to send in their checks so we can pay for this."

If voters approve the purchase, the new vehicle could join the road crew's fleet in early December, Bartlett said.

Selectmen have put in an order for the truck, but are not under any obligation to buy it, she said.

"We didn't sign anything or commit the town to a contract," Bartlett said. "If we hadn't put in some type of order early, it would have been January or February before we got it. We desperately need this piece of equipment."

Local land trust urged: 'think big'

By KIRK SEIGEL

A director of the Rangeley Lakes Heritage Trust told Mahoosuc Land Trust members Sunday that "doing something big is sometimes easier than doing something small," as he spoke of his group's massive conservation project on Mooselookmeguntic and Cupsuptic Lakes, and the Kennebecago River.

The comments were made at the local land trust's 5th annual meeting at the Moses Mason House Sunday evening.

Richard Spencer, a driving force behind the Rangeley project, unfolded the story that began with the effort to purchase a 1250-acre parcel on the west side of Mooselookmeguntic and which will lead to land or easement purchases totaling almost 10,000 acres, extending along 20 miles of waterfront.

Critical to the success of the projects, Spencer said, was the cooperation of numerous landowners, the state and federal government, Maine Coast Heritage Trust, and a woman named Bessie Phillips who is being credited with the largest gift of land in the state since Baxter State Park.

Phillips had spent 22 years gathering property that she felt should be permanently protected for low intensity public recreation, Spencer said.

When she unexpectedly contacted the Rangeley Lakes Heritage Trust (RLHT) about 5,000 acres of land, last year, the scale of the conservation effort suddenly became very significant.

"It was all made possible by her incredible life work combined with our efforts," Spencer said. "But it wasn't until the project got big enough that the public really got excited about it." Including existing state lands in the Rangeleys, approximately 33,000 acres of land has been conserved for the public.

"The projects show that there are ways to meet everybody's concerns," said Spencer, including the state, the paper companies, people living in the area and seasonal residents and visitors.

"I came to the conclusion that the people at Boise really were conservationists at heart—as long as there were a way to realize their corporate objectives, they would probably rather work with a land trust than with large developers."

Selling land or easements at market value can both allow the companies to realize the economic value of the land, Spencer said, and also continue to provide a timber supply in the future.

For example, RLHT plans to purchase 3.3 miles of lake front next month from Boise Cascade, then sell the development rights to the U.S. Forest Service Forest Legacy Program. The land will be managed for timber production, while minimizing the visual impact from the lakes.

Last month the Land for Maine's Future Board approved the purchase of 1953-acre Bald Mountain, the visual centerpiece of the Rangeley Lakes, located between Mooselookmeguntic Lake and Rangeley Lake. Like the other projects, public access and traditional recreational activities will be top priorities, and timber harvesting will continue.

Spencer said his trust had great fortune to protect the integrity of the Rangeleys' semi-wilderness before large-scale subdivision and lake front building unalterably changed it. "What draws people to Rangeley is the unspoiled nature of the lakes," he said. "The fishing guides, the Chamber of Commerce, seasonal and year-round residents have all supported this conservation effort for that reason."

Proof of this support are the financial gifts from individual donors whose tens of thousands of dollars have complemented funds from the Land for Maine's Future and other sources. "It's really extraordinary how much can be accomplished and how many people's interests can be met with adequate planning," Spencer concluded.

Local boost

Meanwhile, Mahoosuc Land Trust members got a boost from the announcement that six members of the organization's board of directors had pledged $2000 if the membership will match the amount this year.

Members also elected a slate of directors for the coming year, including: Pat Angevine, president; Cindy Brown, vice-president; John Bayerlein, treasurer; and Becky Kendall, Paul McGuire, Bonnie Pooley, Kirk Siegel, Bill Wight, and Robin Zinchuk as directors.

(Seigel is a current director and past president of the Mahoosuc Land Trust.)

SAD44

Board holds line on admin salaries

By WENDY HANSCOM

The SAD44 School Board voted Monday evening to freeze the salaries of the district's administrators, but to increase the group's insurance benefits.

District administrators received a 5 percent pay increase last year. Monday the board agreed to freeze salaries at last year's level, but increased individual insurance packages from $4,020 to $4,500. The group of administrators also receive $1,500 more increase for tuition and conferences fees.

The board also recently voted to keep the salaries of six other non-teaching staff members at last year's level.

However, that group of supervisors, managers and administrative assistants was given a $480 increase in insurance benefits and a $50 increase in workshop and tuition fees. All other benefits will remain at the FY '93 level.

Low oil-bidder losses

The board voted Monday evening to accept the bid of a local oil company instead of the low bid for district heating oil and equipment maintenance.

It will cost the district about $750 to keep its business local. The board awarded the heating oil bid to Brooks Bros. of Bethel instead of C.N. Brown, which is based in South Paris. C.N. Brown's bid was approximately $750 lower than Brooks Bros.

The board vote came over the recommendation of business manager Bruce Powell and buildings and grounds supervisor Burnham Rice.

"C.N. Brown hires local people," said finance committee chair Merton Brown of Bethel, "but I think the local business here is Brooks Bros. I feel we should show our allegiance to that company (Brooks Bros.)."

But Bethel director Jane Rolfe disagreed.

"Business is business," Rolfe said, "and as a district we should look at this as a business decision and go with the low bid."

Ultimately the board turned down C.N. Brown's low bid.

Condom survey out

Monday, the Ad Hoc Committee studying the distribution of condoms at Telstar high and middle schools released its survey of student attitudes toward distributing condoms in school.

Although 93 percent of the 300 eighth- through twelfth-grade students surveyed said condoms should be available in high school, almost half said they would not go to the school nurse for one. One-third wouldn't want their parents notified and 86 percent reported they could get a condom if they wanted one.

One-hundred percent of the students said they were aware they could get a sexually transmitted disease through one sexual encounter.

The Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the district develop a comprehensive health curriculum program that included education on sexuality issues and condom use and possibly look at the issue of condom distribution again in two or three years.

The School Board will look over the survey results and discuss the issue at its next meeting.

Drugs

with other school and school board officials and the group decided to initiate the school-wide search. The district's lawyer was also consulted, he said.

"The decision was based on the fact that we have K through twelfth-grade students here," Jenkins said. "I felt it was in the best interest of the school to see that no other drugs were here, and we did. We also wanted to send a message that drugs are not tolerated in this school."

The district's policy allows for student lockers to be searched.

"Student lockers are school property, and students are aware of that," Jenkins said. "We don't often search lockers, but in the case of a safety issue we can and did."

Last week's search took place after school, and police found nothing, despite information that led them to believe there may have been more drugs in the school, according to Maine Drug Enforcement Agency agent Tony Milligan.

Police used trained dogs provided by the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department and the Bridgton Police Department.

"School board officials and the superintendent all had a legitimate concern that there might be more drugs on the property," Milligan said. "They were concerned because of the Kindergarten through twelfth-grade students on the property. As an issue of safety they asked for the search."

"We had an agreement that we, the police, would not take enforcement action if anything was found—the school would take charge. We weren't going to arrest anybody. We were doing it as a safety issue. We were in the hallways with the dogs and the kids saw us in our raid jackets so they were made aware that we were there for their safety."

comers to their one. We just kept shooting, but their defense did a good job."

Telstar ends their season with a 7-4-2 record. The Rebels scored 20 goals in the regular season and had nine goals scored against them. Telstar also logged eight shutouts.

The team was seeded third in Western Maine State Class C, and did better in the regular season than many onlookers expected.

"As a team we feel really good about the season," senior Kelsey Cross said. "In the beginning people thought we weren't going very far. It's kind of disappointing for seniors, but we have a young team. And there's a lot of freshmen coming up."

Telstar will have much of its squad back next year, but will lose seniors Cross, Myers, Angie Mills, Misty Hutchins, Sheila Douglas, Sarah Coolidge, Melissa Howe, Dawn Seames and Jen Bean.

Soccer

"Seniors Josh Fogg, Chris Howe, Sean Gilson, Rob Greenwell and Nate Harvey played their final game for Telstar with real class and intensity," coach Robert Remington said.

"Over all it was a good season," Gilson said. "We played well as a team. It's hard to losing a playoff game, because this is my last year. It's a disappointment. I was hoping we would at least make it to the finals."

Telstar ended the season with a 9-2-1 record. The Rebels scored 21 goals in the regular season, had 10 scored against them and logged six shutouts.

North Newry

By GIL SEELEY

Happy 14th birthday Dani Littlehale!

The Newry Firemen's Ladies Auxiliary met Thursday, Oct. 14 at 7 p.m. at the Town Building with Brenda Wight presiding. It was voted to have a food sale Nov. 20 at the I.G.A. store from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The new logo mugs will be on display and for sale at $5 each, also the remaining hats at $5. There will be a 50/50 raffle for those who want to take a chance. The winner will get half of the total take...Good luck.

Services were held at the Newry Community Church on Sunday, Oct. 17, with Pastor Rodney Hanscom at the pulpit and daughter Nancy at the organ. The message of the day was "Standing Tall" from Ezekiel 31:1-18. "Whom art thou like in thy greatness? Like the cedar in Lebanon with fair branches and with a shadowing shroud and of a high stature, and his top was among the thick boughs."

Sylvia and Bill Wight attended the M.S.A. Board and Directors' Meeting at the Augusta Lodge of the Elks. A fabulous buffet dinner was served by the Augusta Elks Lodge's catering service prior to the directors' meeting.

Members of the "Newry Bowling Gang" who went to the Oxford Lanes, Rumford, were: Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Gil Seeley, Eleanor Davis, Bea Lowell and Doris Parent. Of the "Lefties" Betsy was high on the triples but Karlene beat her by two on the singles. Betsy made 103 and 105 singles and Karlene 107. Of the "Righties" Eleanor was high on the average but Doris was high on the triples, and Bea was high on the singles. Betsy had five spares, Karlene had four spares, Gil had three spares, Eleanor and Bea had one spare each, Bea also had one strike, and Doris had three spares.

Karlene and Ras Bachelder hosted a birthday party for Betsy Clark and Gil Seeley on Thursday, Oct. 21, with a delicious lunch, cake and coffee. Karlene's mother, Julia Goodman, was also there to enjoy. There were presents galore and tricky candles on the cakes... You make a wish and if the candles all go out you get your wish. Well, these candles were Halloween tricksters; they kept lighting up again and again with every wish and puff. Hmmm... Did Betsy and Gil get their wish? I'll leave it for you to decide. We all had great laughs anyway. Many happy returns of the day, and Betsy and Gil thank them for a fun day.

The Windy Valleys Sno-Mobile Club met Thursday night, Oct. 21, at the New Town Building with 13 members present. President Owen Wight opened the meeting. Leon Dunn, Owen Wight, Herb Kittredge and Bill Wight, trail men, are all busy grooming the trails. Next meeting will be Nov. 18, 7 p.m. at the same place.

Bill Wight and Sylvia represented the club at the monthly executive board and directors' meeting of the M.S.A. Tuesday, Oct. 19, at the Holiday Inn in Waterville.

By ALICE HOYT

All school-age children are invited to a special good news club at the Bryant Pond Baptist Church Awana Room from 6 to 7 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 28. Miss Joyce, director of Western Maine CEF, will be conducting the club.

Franklin Grange No. 124 met Monday, Oct. 18 for a regular meeting and Halloween party. Twenty-five were present with one guest. Program: song by all; opening thought, Anna Swan; song by all; poem read by Alice Hoyt; Laura Hutchins played her accordion and Dot Canwell played the piano; song by all; game tying shoes with one couple each having hand behind their back; costume parade—there were some very good costumes and each one received a piece of candy; closing song, Peggy Blake and Russell Yates will attend State Grange next week and would like to take things to be sold on C.W.A. table.

Fudge always goes.

There will be a flu clinic at West Paris Grange Hall on Nov. 5 from 9 to 12 a.m. for all who wish to go. Next meeting is Nov. 1 program on Americanism; wear red, white and blue.

The Woodstock Senior Citizens will meet at the Grange Hall on Thursday, Nov. 4, for a Thanksgiving dinner put on by the WHS Alumni Association. The program is by Herschel Abbott. The meeting starts at 11:30.

The TV program on Channel IV by Rev. Linwood Hanson scheduled for Tuesday has been changed from 7 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The officers of the WHS alumni and a couple others met at Ruth Tyler's to plan the Woodstock Senior Citizens' dinner in November.

The Historical Society has many uniforms, dresses, and quilts. They also have a very fine art collection. The old print and frame given recently were outstanding. Nobel Prize winner Toni Morrison once wrote, "We need some kind of tomorrow." The Historical Society agrees.

The Woodstock Extension met on Wednesday to make things for the Holiday Open House to be held on Saturday, Nov. 6.

Robert Hoyt visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hoyt, and grandmother Beatrice Farnum last Tuesday.

Maggie and Joseph Hoyt visited their father, James Hoyt over the weekend.

I apologize to all who gave me news last week. I see it didn't make the paper. It was mailed Thursday morning so I don't know where it went.

East Stoneham

By ELEANOR NELSON

I had an enjoyable evening on Oct. 19 when I attended the Cub Scout Pack 155 "Fellers Cake Bake" program which was held at the New Suncook School in Lovell. Dale Nelson, as master of ceremonies, got things rolling a bit after 7 p.m. after people settled down from viewing the 25 beautifully decorated cakes on display that the young Cub Scouts and dads had put together for this occasion. They really used their imagination to work on these. Over 60 people were at this program. Winners in the five categories were: Yummy Looking, Zachary Drew; Best Cub Scout Theme, Chris Mason; and Best Tasting, Ryan Crowell. Awards were given out to all those who participated in making cakes and the judges, Dave and Peg Mason had a hard time in judging, as they were all good and they realized that a lot of thought and time went into the making of these cakes. After the awards were given out the five winning cakes were auctioned off by auctioneer John Morrison. The realized a total of $62.

Kitty Nelson spoke briefly about the popcorn sales and thanked all those who sold or bought popcorn from the Cub Scouts.

Donna Woodward spoke about Scouting for Food which will be coming up soon (in fact I believe it will be Oct. 30 that they will bring the bags to be put on your doorknob to be filled with non-perishable items (cans of food) for the needy and to be picked up a week later on Nov. 6). With so much unemployment in the area, anything will be welcomed, I'm sure. Four new Cub Scouts were signed up, making a total of 35, also one new leader. While the judging was taking place, Steve Boucher gave a real good talk about fire safety and reminded people to check their smoke alarms. He also told people to think and plan and talk about how to get out of the building in case of fire and what to do.

After the program, guess what was for refreshments! Cakes of course! And a glass of milk. Everyone had a chance to taste all those yummy cakes. What a nice evening it was.

Thaxter Littlefield's trailer home has been moved from the Bradley Nelson property and is now over on the Old School House Road.

Milton Barker's new home is all set now and ready for occupancy.

Lawrence Dadmun was here a few days ago visiting relatives and friends. He is currently living in Damariscotta.

One day this past week, I was surprised and pleased to see Thaxter Littlefield at a local restaurant in South Paris. He was with friends at a bowler's banquet. This was a meeting place for residents from Ledgeview Home and Market Square Home.

Stoneham has had a new fire truck donated to them. This came from a Brian Hoagland in Casco. It is a real shiny fire truck and has been well equipped and taken care of. I believe it is a 1967 Mac and has 1,000 gallon pumper. It's a great gift and is very much appreciated. Albert Fox, our fire chief, and Michael brought it home this past week.

There was a planning board meeting this past week and three permits were discussed and voted on. Also three representatives of Evergreen Valley Development were there and discussed at length on what is being planned for activities over there. I believe Bob Bahre bought this property in 1986 and is now ready to start developing a business over there. This will be a good thing for our town and townspeople.

Diane Johnson is at home and doing well after having further surgery in Boston.

Don't forget the Hunters' supper (public) on Thursday, Nov. 4 at the East Stoneham Church at 5 to 6:30 p.m. This will be beans, casseroles, pies, etc.

So. Woodstock

By ANDREA WING

Harland and Louella Harlow have been visiting relatives and friends for a couple of weeks. They've now returned to their home in Colorado.

Larry Billings, Curator at Woodstock Historical Society, reports that the society offers everyone something to learn about. Also, anyone can add to what is offered with a donation of an exhibit. The Historical Society notes America has several new recipients of the Nobel Prize.

Saturday morning and afternoon was a busy place at Richard and Andrea Wing's this week. A get-together was held for Dr. Gary Critser, wife Rosie and son Nathan (seven-months old). Gary is Andrea's nephew and had not been to Maine for 28 years. A potluck meal was enjoyed. Those attending were: from Woodstock: Richard and Andrea Wing, Kellie and Jessie Hart, Tommy Poland, Dennis Poland, Meagan Mack, Cleo Rye-son, and Claribel Poland; from South Paris: Jennie Record; from West Paris: Phelps and Joan Poland, Terry and Phil Merrill, Tim Poland, Todd Poland, and Kenneth Poland; from Norway: Donna Kusheba; from Campton, N.H.: James and Evelyn Dunn; from Bethel, Judi Brown and Tracy Grover; and the guests from Clovis, Calif., Gary, Rosie and Nathan Critser.

Gary was only here for the day, so we tried to get him to see most of the family while he was here.

Gary works in a medical clinic in California and is the son of Dottie Poland Critser, a South Woodstock native. Gary and family stayed with Leon and Rosalie Poland on Friday night.

Gordon and Sally Doughty and Kathleen Robertson spent several days with their daughter Cheryl Sholl and Drew, Kirby and Caroline in Cranberry, N.J., during the weekend. The breakfast will be on Saturday, Oct. 30, from 5 to 8 a.m. We will be serving orange juice, eggs/pancakes, bacon, toast and coffee. Where can you get all that for $4? The harvest has been gathered, in and beyond the hedge is heard the sound of crickets. Little squirrels scurry around to gather nuts and berries on the ground. Gray skies chase away the sun. A brilliant mantle of rose, scarlet and gold is flung over the hills. The colored leaves go where they will. Some coast down and are still, while others go dancing in the wind. Soon all will fade until the tall pines, the hemlocks and spruces with their spires will become masters of the land, while here and there an oak tree will cling to its dried, colored leaves. The towering beech trees will look like old gray elephants. Mountains in the distant view have colors never the same. They may be blue, deep purple or black. Clouds are forever drifting over the summits and yet, will never be gone. These are the thoughts and scenes of lovely autumn. John Betts is doing very well at home after his surgery. His brother has been visiting him for a few days. Louise DiArenzo and a friend have returned home to Pennsylvania after a week here with her mother, Zilpha DiArenzo. I attended the Retired Teachers meeting in West Paris on Saturday at the Finnish-American Heritage Center. It was very interesting. My house has a new shingled roof so a couple of days I had plenty of overhead "music." David, Sally, Mary and Ann Holt were at the home of their parents, Leonas and Fay, on Sunday. My callers were Mr. and Mrs. Artland Rogers, Bertha Cole of Norway and Florence Loughnan of Oxford, John and Lee Betts and Nita Hakala, local.

Maggie Ring returned home this past weekend after visiting with Keith's sister Priscilla Zawaski in Corvallis, Ore. Maggie and Priscilla attended the Northwest Regional Conference which was held on an Indian reservation on the eastern side of Cascades mountain called Kanaceta. After the conference the two went to the coast at New Port and visited with Priscilla's nephew and family. On Maggie's first Saturday home her son Herb, from Temple visited her. Lorraine Mills is getting her house ready for the winter months ahead. This past week Community Concepts supplied roofing material and some of the men from Praise Assembly of God did the labor. These men spent three days on the roof. Next, Lorraine is looking into different heating. Community Concepts will also send a contractor over to repair her ceiling and blow in insulation. The Greenwood Historical Society will be having their next meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 3. The speaker this time will be Allan Fraser. He will present a slide show about the Oxford County area. A few weeks back errors in names were made. Here are the corrections: Denise Swan is the new secretary and the donation was from Vivian Daicy.

West Bethel

By CONSTANCE BROADBENT

Dear Joan and Paul, On the eve of my baby brother's birthday, that makes him 49 and me 50-something, I sit to think, as I let the "windows" float on the screen. The keyboard awaits my terpsichorean titillation; I'm anxious to write after a long silence; but my thoughts are floating in and out like those windows.

In my daydreams I see you two, embarking on your Housatonic adventure, embracing your new home, your new lifestyle, your new challenge...and I clap for you. I see brother Tom, knapsack of hugs and hope slung over his shoulder as he makes a new start, his old security blanket in shreds and his future shrouded in the unknown...and I pray for him.

I see the progeny, yours and ours, stepping up to life with enthusiasm and confidence...and I whisper words of thanks for them. I think of the recent weeks that D. and I spent nursing Muddy back to mobility, and I know that the time and the care, the helping and the doing were our gifts to her need...and I offer kudos for her 89-year-old elasticity.

As I try to make sense of my musings, I see that I'm replaying instances of family resiliency, collaboration, and strength. These good thoughts and happy memories of the ken of our kin are precipitated, no doubt, by this morning's breakfast meeting of "Women for Women" at the Sudbury Inn.

A wonderful thing happened! Scores of local women gathered to "break quiche" and foment feelings at dawn's early light (that's that period between darkness and the time that I usually agree to make pleasant conversation)...The focus was on the Safer Families Project...October being "Safer Families Month," here and there, the Bethel-based group, sponsored by the Health Center and nurtured by Lynn Mason, invited Lois Reckitt to speak to us of her work with the Family Crisis Shelter in Portland.

We who are protected by love and commune heard of the fears and the horrors and the loneliness that fill the days of some lives...in Portland, where Lois and her staff provide intervention and shelter, and in places like Bethel, where most of us feel safe. By our mere presence, we acknowledged that the problems of abuse and battering are not restricted to the cities, or to the young, or the poor. And we heard words of encouragement from Lois as she described the slow but steady growth of the movement to intervene in family crises. It is the willingness of those of us who are safe to help those who are not, that is the key to righting a terrible wrong.

I paid for my delectable breakfast at the Sudbury; it cost me a saw-buck. But the proceeds were being shared with the Safer Families Project...a fin for the food, and a fin for the cause. That's a good deal. All of us in attendance enjoyed breaking our fast in the pleasant surroundings and in the company of a roomful of women who care enough to show up for others who cannot. In the process of listening and talking, I learned that up to 50 percent of all emergency room treatments are a direct result of battering of some kind! Most of the battering is done by men who claim power as their birthright. And 97 percent of the battered and the broken are women and their children who seek the recourse, the support, and the shelter that is only just becoming available to them.

I drove back to West Bethel with Jane Hosterman who had invited me to attend the breakfast. We talked at length about the problems of battered women, the need to protect them, the need to heighten awareness that the unspeakable acts are being played out under our very noses, and the ultimate goal of educating a population to the rights of all humans (even WOMEN) to equality of treatment.

After a lengthy discussion in the car, our words metered by the rhythm of the windshield wipers, I left Jane and continued out the Flat Road to home. Along the drizzly way, I responded to the stimuli that swept by. The gathering of birds along the wires, the curious gold of the misty mountains that travel beside the road, the stacks of wood that portend the need to sit by the fire, all reminded me of my own sense of safety, and heightened my indignation that others who live nearby may not feel so secure.

I've never been beaten (unless you count checkers or cribbage)...but that doesn't mean that I can ignore those who have. I've never in my 50-plus years questioned whether I am loved, either by my parents, my husband, my children, my siblings, my friends like you, or myself...but that doesn't mean that I should rest on the laurels of that love. I've never known poverty of circumstance or soul...but that doesn't mean that I should keep my distance from those who have.

I guess, dear friends of the decades, I have been inspired by this most recent encounter. I feel the need to take action...and since my latest forms of indulgence are in painting and writing, perhaps I can use the resources at my fingertips to educate the ignorant, enlighten the ostrich, awaken the sleeping giantess. No one should have to live in a family where one person assumes all the control and all the power. No one should have to suffer the pain of violence against her person or her sense of self. No one has the right to beat another into submission; no one should have to stand there and take the beating!

We as a happy family look forward to gathering with your happy family when the rapidly approaching Thanksgiving holiday dawns. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could share secrets for success with the beaters and the beatees. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could make home a safe place for all to be...perhaps the secret lies in the telling...hmm...(Look out! She's musing again!)

Settle in to your new riverview haven, oh friends from the fifties. Get all your ducks in a row. And then hie thee to the hills!... It's time to gather again, to give thanks again, to pray for safety for the unsafe. We await your arrival with great anticipation and even greater meal-balls!

Love,
C.B.

Try us first!

We hear it all the time... Someone's been looking all over the countryside for some obscure piece of tackle or equipment. They try us as a last resort, and we had it all along! Or, they stop in after buying clay pigeons or ammo or something at one of the department stores, and we've got what they just bought...cheaper!!!

We've got a great selection of used guns. And, we stand by them. If you have a problem with a gun you bought from us, bring it back and we'll make it right with you. That's easy for us. Our gunsmith, Bruce Reynolds, is on duty in the store five days a week. We're also a Remington Warranty Repair Station and Recommended Gunsmith. If you've got a problem with a Remington, bring it in.

Special orders are no problem. It's a gun, even when you've snail. So, if you want something we don't have, we can get it for you in some instances in twenty-four hours. In any case, we can tell you just when it'll be here.

We're stocking up right now for the hunting season and we've got a pile of stuff: knives, scopes, Topo maps, clothing, reloading supplies, holsters, gun cases, calls, rattling antlers, ammo. Speaking of ammo, we always try to keep a box or two of the hard-to-find calibers like 7.7 Jap., 38-55, 44-40, 307 Win. and the like. Want a laugh? Try asking the clerk at Wally Market for a box of 32-20's!

All of us here are into hunting, fishing or shooting. I forgot to mention Curt Twitchell. He's in one day a week. The guy knows more about handguns than anyone around! We try to stock what we think you need at the best values we can find. We're here Monday thru Saturday 9-5 and Fridays 9-6, and we'll be open late Friday night before the first day of deer season.

So, try us first, and spend more time out in the woods or on the range!

AHHS FLU CLINIC

Androscoggin Home Health Services will once again host a number of flu vaccine clinics throughout the Tri-county area.

The clinic scheduled for the Oxford Hills area will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 9 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the South Paris Fire Station, Pine Street.

The charge for the vaccine is $8, which partially covers the cost of the services. The cost for the vaccine is covered by Medicare for Medicare-insured individuals. Those insured under Medicare must bring their Medicare insurance card to the clinic.

Flu shots will not be given to people under the age of 13. People attending the clinic should bring a list of all medications they are currently taking. Those with colds, fevers, or otherwise not feeling well cannot be given flu shots during the clinic. People who are uncertain as to whether or not they should have the vaccine should consult their physician. Those receiving flu shots will be asked to wait 15 minutes afterwards in order to make certain that there's not an adverse reaction. AHHS also provides flu shots to its active patients at no additional charge.

For additional information, those interested should call their family physician or the Androscoggin Home Health Services office in Norway at 743-9285 or 1-800-244-9285.

Just Imagine Coffeehouse

The Just Imagine Coffeehouse will open Saturday, Nov. 6, 7 to 10 p.m. at the West Parish Congregational Church. Performers will be Julia Lane and Fred Gosbee, of the folk group Castlebay from Round Pond. Castlebay's music weaves together the timeless traditions of the British Isles and the rugged Maine coast. Julia's voice has been compared to Jean Redpath's, and her Celtic harp playing has won several awards. Fred writes romantic love songs, raucous sea songs, and humorous ditties which celebrate the dignity and humanity of ordinary people using humor and courage in the face of adversity. He plays the 12-string guitar, pennywhistle, recorder and five-string viola.

The Just Imagine Coffeehouse opens the first Saturday night of each month, providing family fun that is smoke-free and alcohol-free. Donations are requested—$3 or $1.50 for seniors and children. Homemade refreshments are sold. Local performers are invited to the open mike. Remember—Castlebay folk group at the coffeehouse, West Parish Congregational Church, next to Gould Academy—7 to 10 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 7.

Bethel/Evans Notch Economic Project update

By GREGORY HERRICK

I would like to take this opportunity to inform the citizens of the region about the progress being made on the Bethel/Evans Notch Economic Project. Many may recall the explanatory article which appeared in The Bethel Citizen on Sept. 8. Many are probably wondering what of "George" has been up to. (It's Greg, by the way.)

I have been busy educating myself about the area. Reading reports and gathering data is rewarding, but invisible work. I am beginning to put together an economic base profile, but the study portion of this project is not nearly as important as the community-based decision making process that is to follow.

The Advisory Committee and I have started formulating how to conduct this process. I shall begin by updating the community about our basic plans and by making myself available to answer any questions people may have. Look for me to attend selectmen's meetings throughout the region where I will present a brief outline of the work done to date and the goals of the project. These presentations will be announced ahead of time, and I will be available for questions before and after these meetings.

I must stress that this project is all about local people working together to identify problems and possibilities and developing strategies to overcome the problems and realize the possibilities. The Advisory Committee and I do not believe people are interested in a report that tells anyone what to do. The answers will not come from any economist or government agency, but rather, from the strong community which exists in this area.

I will inform people of meetings or events I will be attending and I welcome anyone with questions or comments to contact me at the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce at 824-2282. Please do not hesitate to call.

New Ski Mt. Abram just waiting for snow

By JOHN VINCENT

The smiles were everywhere here Saturday even though there wasn't a snowflake at Ski Mount Abram, where new owners are preparing for the area's 33rd winter season.

More than 100 people attended the Winter Warm-up Weekend at the revitalized 687-acre facility, one of the longest operating ski areas in the state.

Manager and part-owner Rick Hoddinott of Readfield told the crowd, "We plan on getting this up and going here in a really positive direction."

He said the crew of up to 50 full-time seasonal employees is dedicated to making the ski resort fun and profitable. New equipment to expand snowmaking capability, repairs to buildings and other refurbishing projects are the focus of the owners' efforts this season.

"We'll be open earlier than ever before," said Hoddinott, adding he is waiting for the first good cold snap to fire the guns and open the slopes.

The ski area includes over 100 acres of skiing terrain, 22 trails, two chairlifts and three surface lifts on 1,970-foot hill.

Hoddinott, who has run Downeast Whitewater Rafting Co. at The Forks for 15 years, is one of five new Maine owners. His unsuccessful $665,000 bid at a bank auction last May prompted him to contact other high bidders to suggest pooling their capital. The joint venture worked and Hoddinott, Tom Kennison of Oxford, Jeff Wan Decker of Oufield, Tim Good of Kennebunk and Pat Dutton of Bath purchased Ski Mount Abram Inc. for an undisclosed sum in June.

Oxford Bank and Trust, which foreclosed on a $1 million loan to former owner Donald Cross, who endured three consecutive bad ski winters, handed them the title.

Cross and his wife, Jean, were in attendance Saturday and Hoddinott thanked them for all their help in getting the ski area running again.

"We have our vision, and you turn around and look at the chalets across the street, that was their vision 30 years ago and I want to thank them for that," Hoddinott said.

Cynthia Wescott, a Norway resident who had been skiing at the mountain for 27 years, said she was excited by the changes at the resort.

"They've taken a great step forward in getting everyone fired up to be back here, the snowmaking is going to be better, they're going to continue with the fabulous grooming they have," Wescott said, explaining the resort was well-known for perfect snow grooming.

"There's some kind of magic here, I don't know what it is. I think we lost it for a little while and I think it's back, I know it's going to be back, it's already here, it's in the air," Wescott said.

Wescott said the family-resort tag being pushed by the owners is appropriate because the learn-to-ski area is very easy to ski on, and the atmosphere is friendly and slow-paced.

Bob Brousseau of Cape Cod, Mass., who owns a house and a condo near Mount Abram, said he was greatly relieved when the new owners bought the place.

"When you have two pieces of property up here, you have a significant investment, but not only that, we just love the area," said Brousseau. He and his family get season passes and visit most weekends and during his winter vacation, he said.

"What they've done this summer is wonderful," Brousseau added. "They needed something to spruce it up and make it look nice and all these pine boards (in the remodeled locker room) are new, the paint is new, they have a bathroom in the lounge, they never had that, we had to walk down here... This is really super. I'm really favorably impressed with what I see. The attitude is open, I think it's going to be successful."

"Once in a while we go up to Sunday River (in Newry), but the problem with Sunday River, of course, is the mobs of people and I have to ski weekends and vacation weeks," Brousseau said.

"It's just blown me away, all the support for the mountain," said Hoddinott.

He asked people to put their suggestions on post-it notes on a suggestion board, though not promising to implement every one. Some suggested night skiing, others wanted special passes for after-school, and some wanted snowmaking on the west side of the mountain.

Hoddinott and his wife, Micki, and Van Decker will run the resort.

Van Decker and Kennison, of Kennison Real Estate in Norway, have been ski patrol members at Mount Abram the last few years, while Good of the tool distribution firm of CNC Systems Inc., and Dutton of Bath Electrical have been regular skiers there.

Telstar High School Class of 1994 MEA Test Scores above State Average

By TED DAVIS

Statewide averages of 11th-grade students' scores on the 1993 Maine educational assessment showed improvements in math, science and the humanities, and SAD44 scores were high in all subjects this year.

Telstar's 11th-graders last year scored higher than the state's averages in all five subjects tested, reading was 15 points above the state average of 285; writing was 30 points above the state average of 270; mathematics was 45 points above the state average; science was 55 points above the state average; and humanities was 45 points above the state average. MEA scores range from 100 to 400 points.

At the state level, according to the Department of Education, there was a 10-point gain in math and a 5-point gain in both science and the humanities. The reading scores remained constant.

State Education Commission Leo G. Martin said in a prepared statement that better math problem-solving skills accounted for the high math scores. He said also that the gap between girls' and boys' scores in math and science is continuing to shrink, as girls score higher in those portions of the test.

In the humanities portion of the MEA test, the students tested on literature, the visual and performing

Woodstock Fifth-graders Enjoy Two-day Leadership Development Experience

During the first week of the school year the fifth-grade students at Woodstock School participated in a two-day leadership development program at the Maine Conservation School in Bryant Pond. This program resulted from a collaborative effort involving Conservation School staff members, fifth-grade teacher Maire Newcomb, guidance counselor Wendy Ford, and Charles Plummer, Woodstock School principal.

The underlying goal was to enhance their awareness that as fifth-grade students, students in the lower grades look up to them as school leaders and to involve them in leadership development activities that would make it possible for them to serve as positive role models for the lower grade students.

The following is a listing of the responses written by the fifth-grade students about the activities that they had participated in:

"I liked a game called hug-a-tree. It is really interesting, you have to blindfold your partner and lead them to a tree. They have to hug it and feel it. Then you take the person back to the place you started and take the blindfold off. They have to find the tree."

Marie Cole

"I liked a game called camouflage."

Nate Hurd

"Truly a trip worth taking."

Caitlin Gallagher

"My favorite part of our trip was when we could play games and when we went up to the lodge to write in our journals."

Melanie Ryerson

"I liked the canoeing. I thought it was a lot of fun. If I were you I'd go there."

Greg Koch

"I like to play camouflage and all the other games."

Renee Royer

"I learned to use more of what I have."

Andover Students Excited about Direct-Experience Science and Math Activities

An approach being used successfully by Andover staff members as a means of extending and enriching classroom instruction for students is to involve them in direct-experience activities. The first-, second-, and third-graders have been taken on nature walks to Emerson's Bog, which is just a short distance from the school. There, they have had the opportunity to put into practice observation skills by observing seasonal and ecological changes in the bog at different times of the year. They have also collected samples and aquatic life for further study and observation in the classroom.

Under the direction of Andover teacher Roger Sabin, the 11th annual toad weighing contest was held during the early part of September. This annual event is designed to give students some firsthand experiences in using metric weights. Steve Chenery was the first-place winner, bringing in a toad that weighed in at 150 grams. Jenny Fyrberg took second-place honors with a toad that tipped the scales at

Dan Hart Moves

By NATALIE TIMBERLAKE

Sixteen years ago, Dan Hart stepped out of the University of Southern Maine (then, University of Maine, Portland-Gorham) with a degree in criminal justice, with a major in juvenile delinquency. In 1981, he went to work with the Cumberland County Training Center, a CETA facility, where he worked in a vocational training setting with 14 to 21 year olds.

Two years later, he moved to Bethel, complete with a graduate degree in counseling--also from USM--and started turning wheels in the guidance department at Telstar High School. Hart, who has guided many growth changes in guidance in SAD44, leaves Telstar at the end of this week--October 29--to be-

Middle School Special Education Creates New Learning Center

By BRUCE BELL

With the help of the SAD44 maintenance staff, a new special education learning center has been created at Telstar Middle School. The new center is located on the second floor in the space occupied by the former music room. With the addition of CPS school to the Telstar complex, it became necessary to find a new location for the middle-level special education program.

The music area was selected and redesigned to include a variety of instructional spaces. The newly-designed area includes three small-group instructional classrooms, an instructional and support area for educational technicians, along with office space for Chapter 1 supervisor Nan Timberlake, and the director of special education, Ann Holt. Many hours of hard work have gone into this effort and everyone using the space is pleased with the results.

Rick Charrette

By PATRICK DONOVAN
AND ALEX JOHNSON

On Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 29 and 30, songwriter and musician Rick Charrette visited the Crescent Park School for a concert and classroom workshops.

At a concert in the Telstar High School auditorium, both CPS students and the Woodstock School enjoyed Rick Charrette as he sang a number of songs. We were also joined by the Telstar Middle School sixth-grade students.

Some of the kids got to go up on stage and perform with Rick Charrette. At the end of the concert, all of the teachers got up and sang "Bubble Gum."

After the concert, Rick spent the rest of Wednesday and all of Thursday doing workshops with several classes. In Ms. Mattson's and Mrs. Coolidge's first- and second-grade classes, Rick played his guitar and helped the classes to write a song. He also brought out his Baxter the Bear puppet for everyone to see!

Here are two of the songs that classes wrote with Rick Charrette:

There's no one else I'd rather be There's no one else I'd rather be than me

It doesn't cost too much, in fact it's free,

When I wake up in the morning, I feel my life fits me.

I don't need to be invented.

I know what I'm going to be.

I going to be me.

Written by: Mr. Hoy's fourth-grade, Ms. Caddigan's third-grade, and Rick Charrette.

Soda Pop

Soda, soda, I drink soda.
Soda, soda, soda pop.
I drink soda, you drink soda.
Soda, soda, soda pop.
Soda, soda, soda's fizzy.
Soda, soda, makes you dizzy
Soda, soda, soda I drink soda.
Soda, soda, soda pop.

Written by: Ms. Mattson's first-grade, Ms. Coolidge's second-grade and Rick Charrette.

Rick Charrette sent the following note to Ms. Coolidge's class:

To Ms. Coolidge's class: It was totally awesome writing the soda pop song with you. Wishing you lots of happy sing. Your friend Rick Charrette.

EDUQUEST—CPS students work on computers supplied IBM.

Eduquest Comes to Crescent Park School

A collaborative article

Recently, IBM Corporation selected Crescent Park School to participate in a special program: Eduquest.

Principal David Murphy said it is thanks to the interest several CPS teachers have displayed over the past two years that this is happening. The pilot program will see 26 IBM computers, several printers, a file server, and tens of thousands of dollars worth of software being used in four CPS classrooms over the coming months.

These energetic, innovative teachers are Linda Kuzyk (grade five), Judy Coolidge (grade two), Brenda Wight (grade three), and Lenny Hoy (grade four). Along with CPS Computer Committee chairman Peter Kuzyk, who is the systems operator, they all received four days of training at IBM in Portland prior to implementing the Eduquest Classroom 2000 in their classrooms.

As they use the programs, an IBM consultant will be available to the CPS staff as needed during the next three months. The goal of initiating this new program is to allow staff and students to experiment with the IBMs and compare them to the Apple computers. Principal David

Murphy notes that this will be especially important in addressing the needs of the new Crescent Park facility.

Linda Kuzyk explained the placement of the computers. Six computers have been placed with each of the four trained teachers. Four for student use and the sixth is a teacher work station where the ROM is located. There are also networked IBM computers which have multimedia software and programs in math, reading, and writing.

She summarized her perspective: "Enthusiastic teachers = enthusiastic students = High energy, high dependent environment." And then she said she would probably enjoy the notes the students write about the computers.

Here are excerpts from their notes:

--"I like them a lot. (Commented just about everyone!) I like the math. I also like the reading."

--"...the computers are neat. They can talk to me, and there are a lot of games, but you learn from them."

--"I think the computers are neat and it is great how you set it up."

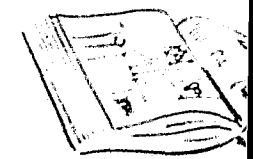

--"...they are fun. They are also challenging."

arts and philosophy.

Martin said he believes that Maine's graduation requirement that all students earn credits in the arts is encouraging more students to explore the visual and performing arts.

The MEA was taken by 12,539 high school juniors during a two-week period last spring.

The first MEAs were given in 1986. Since then, the tests have changed from a primarily multiple choice format to an "open-response" format that requires students to develop their own responses. The questions focus on high-level thinking and often involve students in solving complex problems.

Thirteen students out of the senior class, or 21 percent of the class, scored in the 95th percentile or higher in reading or mathematics or received a raw score of 10 or higher in writing. Two of these students scored in two areas. These 13 students will be issued certificates in recognition of their outstanding performance in the three areas.

As we all know, no one test is a conclusive indicator of how well students perform. We feel that we should use the MEA and other performance evaluations to seek to improve student learning. It certainly appears that this improvement took place in SAD44.

Since coming to Bethel he has been a community contributor, being a stalwart member of the Bethel Rotary Club. He and wife Julie, coordinator of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program of The Children's Health Center, are the proud and supportive parents of two daughters, Lauren and Lindsey.

As Dan moves on with his career, his colleagues at SAD44 wish him well, and appreciate that he will continue to guide many local students as well as maintaining his home here.

RECESS

I have lots of memories from elementary school, some good and some bad. Most of them from my favorite subject...recess!! When the bell rang and we charged out towards the field it sounded like a stampede of elephants charging at a safari vehicle.

My friends and I would play sports in that field all year long. We would even play football in the snow. One time we made up teams and had a Super Bowl. I was on the winning team, the Woodstock Wildcats. The teams consisted of three players. The one bad thing about playing in the snow was that we had to wear boots. Sometimes the boots slowed us down but they kept our feet warm and dry in the deep snow.

We would do this many times. Maybe even a thousand times. And in the spring we would start playing baseball. We played with a plastic bat, and a tennis ball. We would set up the bases, and foul lines. Then we would separate into teams. One team would bat and the other would field. One time Jeremy, my best friend, hit the ball so hard the bat snapped in two. It made a noise almost as loud as thunder in the sky. It wasn't easy in fifth grade knowing that I wouldn't play baseball in that field again.

During the summer I would dream about going back in the fall and playing basketball. I would ponder all my thoughts together and think of when I made a great catch and landed in the mud playing football, how I made a diving catch playing baseball. I would think of all the good times I had and I just couldn't wait to get back to...recess.

BUTTERFLY STORIES

Kindergarten children in Mrs. Salway's classrooms have been learning about butterflies. After tracing and cutting out two butterfly shapes, the children enjoyed water coloring one to the cover of a Butterfly Book. Each child dictated a story about butterflies which was written inside the book.

Here are samples of student stories:

A caterpillar wraps himself in a cocoon. He bites himself out and he hangs black, and he comes out an orange and black butterfly. He flies away. He meets another butterfly.

Kyle Kuvaja

There was once a caterpillar and he came out of an egg. After he got out of the egg he turned into a cocoon and for a long time slept. Some gold dots came out of the chrysalis. He pushed him out and he was an orange and white butterfly. And the mouse chased him. The end.

Chloe LaPointe

A butterfly landed in a tree. It made a cocoon, and when it came out it was a red and green striped butterfly. And then he ate through a leaf. He saw the itsy, bitsy spider.

Brady Chapman

We saw a butterfly when we were going to the field. He was flying down the hill. He was following me. Then he wanted to go in the school.

What peace means to me

P - people being friendly and caring for other people. E - either letting the homeless live in your guestroom if you have one or just making them your friends. A - adults feeling homeless and even children can help, too. C - countries cooperating with other countries. E - everlasting friendship all over the world. To myself, peace means friendship and caring. I wish everybody had peace in their heart.

Kelly Walker
Grade five, CPS

What peace means to me is that elephants wouldn't be killed for their tusks. Foxes and wolves wouldn't be killed for their fur. There wouldn't be any endangered animals. Everybody would be friends with everybody else. There wouldn't be any wars. When you walk outside you wouldn't be worried that someone would hurt you. No one would be mean or tease you. There wouldn't be such a thing as a bomb or a gun. You wouldn't need laws because no one would steal or kill. You wouldn't need jails because everybody would be kind and friendly. That is what peace means to me.

Marianne Nadeau
Grade five, CPS

If I had one wish, just one wish, I would turn all the artillery and other armed forces' vehicles into equipment that would help the environment and keep the peace. For example, I would make a machine that would take all the nuclear waste and make it into dams and supplies for the Mississippi River. I would like to keep the peace for other generations of people and children. People would be happy. They wouldn't starve. Everyone would live a happy life. What peace means to me? Peace means that there would be no wars. People would lend a helping hand. Peace means that blacks and whites would not fight. We would help a friend in

Buddy Thomas

Stop the war. Stop the hate. I would give my life to have peace on earth. I wish we could all be friends and depend on each other. Can't we all just be friends for once and if we can't have peace on earth for the rest of our lives, then can we just have peace for one day please, can we?

Justin Hautaniemi
Grade five, CPS

I want to stop the wars and the hate that people have every now and then. My world is special to me. My world is clean and I want to keep it that way.

I would give almost everything in my life to keep all animals and all people alive. But that will not happen in our world.

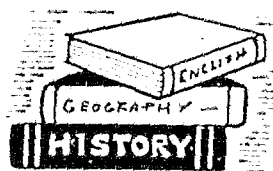

People would stay alive for a very long time if there were no wars anymore.

I want the world to be quiet because it is better when it is quiet. I want it to be quiet so people can have some peace.

I want all people to know about peace because they cannot fight in wars all the time.

I want people to like peace. I want peace in our world. Please can we have peace in our world, please, may we?

SCHOOL

School is fun.
School is neat.
Being in a portable is such a treat.
I like my teacher--my teacher is cool
She makes everything neat in school.
In our portable it's cold in the morn.
In the afternoon it's mightily warm.
We have jobs in our class
but none of us have to empty the trash!
Our jobs are RAP!
We're studying the pond environment

Well that's our rap, I hope you think it's cool.
Remember one thing,
STAY IN SCHOOL!

You can see loons
Taking a morning swim
Taking breakfast to their babies.

THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

The golden anniversary
What does it mean to me?
What can you say in so few words
About a half a century spent together?

The golden anniversary
A celebration of the years
A time to love, share and honor
Fifty years of matrimony.

The golden anniversary
A gathering for one and all
Where friends come to remember
Memories of all the years past.
The golden anniversary
The day was dark and gray

But it will always be warm and bright
In my grandparents' hearts.

THE FAIR

The smell of burgers and fries.
Sizzling of the grills,

Humming of the rides,
Generators always going.
Cows mooing,
Sheep baaing,
Horses whinnying,
Kids whining,
People screaming,
And rushing around.
Judges criticizing,
People commending you.

"Clean up!"
"Tie this!"
"Hold that!"
"You're supposed to be in the ring now!"

Animals needing care,
This is the fair.

RAIN

The cold breeze,
The warm tears,
The soft grass,
The hard fears.

Confused feelings,
mixed with the rain,
the mud washes,
but not the pain.

You walk along,
sorting out your heart,
not having people with you,
that have been there from the start.

The lonely feeling,
feels so great,
one scary thought--
your life and fate.

What will I do?
How might I live?
One thought comes to my mind--
Forget with rain,
Rain to forgive.

THE RIVER

The river is really beautiful,
More than I thought could be.

While standing by its side,
There is oh so much to see.

Entering the river--everyone feels free,
We now begin to drift--effortlessly.

Animals are seen--large and some small,
The effect of these creatures is surely felt by all.

I cannot forget the dead ones--there are so many of course,
I do not know what killed them--pollution is probably the source.

Clean-up is still needed--we all agree to that,
But if we don't get going

The outdoors might not be so vast.

TRAVELING

I live in Alaska with lots of snow,
And there aren't a lot of places to go.

I wanted to travel to Tahiti,
My mother said, "No money, sweetie."

I wanted to see Zanzibar,
My father said, "Way too far."
I wanted to adventure in Hong Kong,
My sister said, "That takes too long."

So I'm stuck here, once more,
Sledding and skiing, my winter chores.

I HATE THE SHOWER NOZZLE

I love to take a shower,
I never see a speck of dust,
I love the feel of water,
It's the nozzle I don't trust.

Whenever I enter the shower,
The nozzle is my foe,
It squirts water everywhere,
Like putting on a show.

COLORS

If all the colors could be seen,
You'd see purple, orange, red, green.

If all the colors were around,
There'd be yellow, black, blue, brown.

If all the colors were in reach,
You'd touch lime, maroon, white, peach.

Whenever you're in a rage,
Just think of pink, gold, tan, beige.
If you could have any color to eat,
You'd try silver, copper, bitersweet.

Now all the colors are combined,
What a great big pretty world of mine.

Ghost Story

When I was about five years old my uncles, John and Brady, bought one of the oldest houses I had ever seen. They told my brother and sister and me that a ghost lived there. So the day that Ian, Sarah, Mom and I decided to go over and help clean up, I was a little hesitant about going.

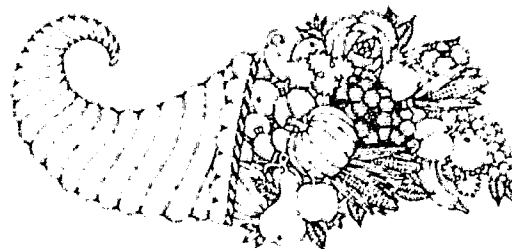

The house certainly looked like a ghost could have lived there. The plaster walls were cracking and the wallpaper was peeling. It was cold and musty smelling. Brady and John started telling me about all the strange noises they had heard the night before. I didn't really believe them, but...

While my mom and Uncle John were touring the upstairs, Uncle Brady said we should take a look at the cellar. Ian and Sarah decided that they would be the brave ones and go down with Brady. But when I looked down it was so dark and scary that I decided not to go. After a little while my brother and sister came up saying that there was nothing to be afraid of, and that the only thing down there were some old children's games. As I started down the stairs my Uncle Brady pecked his head around the corner at the bottom of the stairs. He began to tell me that there was nothing to be afraid of. When all of a sudden, a ghostly white hand reached around his face and pulled him backwards. He screamed and I screamed as I ran, terrified, back up the stairs.

When I got to the top stair, I heard my uncle laughing. I turned around and saw Uncle Brady at the bottom of the stairs, and he looked all right. It turned out that he'd dipped his hand in a bag of flour and grabbed himself around the face just to scare me.

It took me a long time to ever go back to that house again. I was so mad that he scared me like he did, that I didn't even want to talk to him. But, I couldn't stay mad at him for long because I knew that he didn't mean any harm. We've been playing tricks on each other ever since.

Papoose Pond

By PATRICK DONOVAN
AND ALEX JOHNSON

The fifth-grade students from Crescent Park School recently went on a leadership training trip to Papoose Pond in Watford. This is the third year that students from CPS have participated in the program.

The highlight of the trip was leadership training with Ms. Acker, because fifth-graders need to learn to work with others. In one of the challenge games we played, we worked with a partner. We had to get a ball through an obstacle course by squeezing a ball between our knees or thighs. We went under a broom held up by two chairs and over a picnic table as part of the course. At the end, we had to pass off the ball to the next pair of people so they could go through the course.

During our leadership training, we talked about what makes a good leader. We discussed who are leaders and what makes them a good leader. Some of those qualities include friendliness, honesty, and courage. The kids said that a lot of teachers are leaders.

Another highlight of our trip was the canoe experience led by Marle Keane and Steve Wight. Everyone really enjoyed it. A lot of kids learned they could work with people they thought they couldn't work with.

At night, we hiked to a bonfire where we sang songs and told ghost stories. Mr. Murphy told his favorite stories first, then some of the kids shared stories too.

I guess we had a really good time and we learned to work together.

Adult Ed. Director's Corner

By CATHY NEWELL

Were you surprised at the results of the National Adult Literacy Survey released in September? Many people interviewed by the media appeared shocked that nearly 50 percent of American adults are functionally illiterate in the areas of reading, writing or math. Indeed, many of the people tested who fell in that 50 percent group apparently had no idea that their skills were as low as the test indicated. Clearly the implications for American businesses, and for society in general, are major.

In fact, the National Alliance of Business has estimated, through their own data gathering, that only 25 percent of the adult population is highly literate, able to take full advantage of the opportunities presented by the global economy and an increasingly complex and technical workplace.

The National Adult Literacy Survey was funded by the U.S. Department of Education and administered by the Educational Testing Service, the New Jersey company that administers college admissions and other standardized tests. The survey describes adult literacy in terms of literacy skills needed to use various kinds of printed and written information; including prose literacy, document literacy, and quantitative literacy. The report analyzes the connection between literacy skills and social and economic variables such as voting, reading practices, employment and earnings. Nearly 14,600 individuals, age 16 and older, plus 1000 prison inmates were surveyed.

Insufficient education and a growing number of adults whose first language is not English were important reasons that the scores were so low. The test was given in English only. In releasing the study, the Department of Education called for a comprehensive approach to solutions, involving businesses, schools and community groups. To date, despite earlier studies, the approach to adult literacy and retraining has been fragmented nationally through a patchwork of community programs, federal and state programs. In Maine, the steady growth of public school based adult education programs since the early 1970s and the history of cooperation with other providers places our state in a stronger position than many others; yet Maine's programs are chronically underfunded and lack full-time, professional staffs.

The magnitude of the problem in Maine is an issue, given the significant erosion of state support for adult education. In SAD44, our state subsidy was decreased by 30 percent this year from the amount to which current law entitles us. The budget woes of the state, coupled with tough economic times, have impacted our local funding level for the past three years. Fortunately, our district has gradually built our program over 18 years to a well-developed level; however, if all adults in need of academic skills services arrived for intake we'd be swamped, as would all of Maine's adult education programs.

Given this new data, we must clearly return to a position of program development if adults in our state and our area are going to do their part in improving the adult literacy statistics nationally and their own positions in the job market.

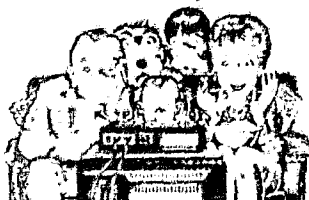

I would bet that these survey results were not a surprise to many of the folks in this area who have been laid off from work and have sought to enroll with Mountain Valley Training or to apply to post-secondary programs. When one is out of school, rust often accumulates in critical areas, and taking an assessment test is a humbling experience. In addition many adults have significant gaps in their education, resulting from less-than-rigorous general programs in high school. Fortunately, adult education offers adults an opportunity to gain academic skills or to refresh skills in a setting that is comfortable and using methods that allow individualization of instruction. We have so many success stories in our area, proving over and over that learning is life-long and that people of all ages are capable of tremendous achievement as adult learners.

Crescent Park School Moves in

Staff and students of the Crescent Park School found themselves in a new setting when school opened this fall. The 300-plus students are now located in 17 portable classrooms in the parking lot of Telstar High School. Thanks to the efforts of many people, the transition has gone extremely well. The reason for this move is the exciting new addition currently being completed at the CPS site. This addition will see a 41,000 square foot area designed to accommodate additional classrooms, a library, a gymnasium, an art room and a cafeteria.

Crescent Park hit the ground running this fall by scheduling an Open House on the second day of school and following that up with Grandparents Day on the following Friday. Between the two events, over 800 visitors had a chance to visit our new "village" and witness firsthand the wonderful things that are going on in the classrooms. The success of this transition is a tribute to the efforts of all concerned.

The P.T.A. will also be sponsoring a "Haunted Village" at CPS this Halloween. This will provide a safe and convenient environment for parents and children to enjoy an evening of trick-or-treating with their friends and teachers.

Crescent Park will continue to be the active place it has been in recent years. We invite you to visit us and see us in our new home.

BATHROOM BREAK—Jolene Shimamura and her first-grade class line up following a regularly scheduled bathroom break. Bathroom visitations have been scheduled during middle school periods to avoid congestion in the hallways.

MAXIMIZING WORK SPACE—Gail Brooks, primary composite room teacher, uses a table in the storage area (part of the Telstar library) to work with her student, Megan Danforth.

STEPHANIE SWAN SAD44
HEALTH COORDINATOR

Stephanie Swan lives in Dixfield with her husband and children. She has resided there for twenty years. She graduated from the University of Maine at Farmington with a B.S. (degree) in community health education with a concentration in school health. She is certified to teach grades K-12. She will be working with faculty and staff to ensure that a comprehensive health program is provided for all students in the district.

She is looking forward to the involvement of parents and the community in an effort to promote wellness and healthy lifestyles among the faculty, staff and students.

Special Education

Lynne Morsehead has joined the Telstar Middle School special education team as an educational technician. She will work with grades six, seven and eight providing study support and skills instruction in language arts.

Lynne received her undergraduate degree from Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa. She majored in elementary education and holds Pennsylvania teaching certification. Lynne worked as a teacher assistant in special education at Gorham

High School before coming to SAD44. Lynne has had a variety of work experiences. In 1992 she served as a residential counselor to persons with developmental disabilities. During her summers she has served as a day camp head counselor.

Lynne keeps fit by enjoying aerobics. In fact, she has served as an intramural aerobics instructor. She also likes to sing and has been a member of her college choir. Lynne is a very outgoing person and likes to work with both adults and children. She is a welcome addition to the Middle School staff.

Lynne's commitment to education is strong. When describing her reasons for entering teaching, she stated that, "Children are important...What I try to do is to emphasize the importance of education to my students. I also try to make them aware of their own importance as well."

Elementary

Two new special educators are the only new faces on the elementary faculty scene this year. Mrs. Constance Crandall has moved into the Crescent Park primary grades composite room teacher post, while Mr. Robert Francis has become resource room teacher at Woodstock.

Crandall, a Biddeford Pool native, comes to Bethel by way of Aroostook County and years as a "service" wife. Her degree is from the University of New England. After teaching three years in grade four, she took seven years to be a homemaker while her husband was in the service. Last year she returned to the classroom as a grade two teacher at Limestone.

She and her husband have moved to So. Paris with their three children: Matthew, 11; Katie, 9; and Andrew, 5. Mr. Crandall is a teacher at Oxford Hills Middle School.

Francis, a 1993 graduate of the University of Maine at Farmington, brings to his first professional position a fondness for travel and outdoor activity. Although born in New Jersey while his father was working in the Department of Defense, and spent his early years living in the states, in Sicily, in Italy, he has called the Clearwater Lake area near Farmington home since elementary school days. Before resuming and completing his college career, he acquired several work experiences.

He is living in Bethel, says he is "very happy to be in the Bethel area," and has already enjoyed climbing Old Speck, and canoeing in the Foliage Flotilla. He is coaching soccer at Woodstock and enjoys traveling and reading.

Science

Telstar High School has a new earth science teacher this fall: Ken Nye is a 1988 graduate of Colby College, with a background in geology and environmental science. He has worked as a field geologist and arborist in Minnesota, Colorado and Maine, prior to returning to school as a student in the University of Southern Maine's extended teacher education program.

Ken grew up in East Andover and is enthusiastic about returning to the western mountains of Maine to begin his teaching career. He has high hopes for an exciting year, sharing his excitement about science with his classes. He is also serving as the assistant high school soccer coach at Telstar.

Jim Fiske has made a return to Telstar High School, teaching chemistry and physics this year. Jim is a familiar figure on the educational scene in Bethel. He taught at Telstar High School in the 1960's and 1970's, and at Gould Academy in the 1980's. The recipient of Maine's Teacher of the Year and an Innovative Teacher of the Year award from the American Physics Teacher Association, Fiske worked closely with, and now replaces, Telstar veteran Tim Kersey who retired in June.

Fiske also worked as a ChemSafe director, with funding from two state grants in 1988-90, assisting school systems and state agencies in complying with the State of Maine's Chemical Right-to-Know law. He spent two summers at Harvard Graduate School of Education to become a master teacher for Harvard Project Physics.

Fiske and his wife Mary Lou reside in Bethel. Their four children are graduates of Telstar High School.

Nova - Region 9 Creating Futures

Business Program Expands
By JOYCE PERKINS

The first day of school brought big changes to Mountain Valley High School and NOVA.

The Medical Office Worker program (MOW) moved from Parker Street to the former business department suite at MVHS. The MOW program, implemented in January, 1992, as one-semester of study, expanded to a full-year course in January, 1993. Core courses include: anatomy, medical terminology, recordkeeping, computer applications, communications for the world of work, medical transcription, notetaking and medical office management. Students will participate in a nine-week workstudy program set to begin November 8. According to Joyce Perkins, MOW instructor, "With the cooperation of area health care providers, we can now offer students what they need most, actual hands-on work experience!"

NOVA has expanded office technology for Mountain Valley and Dirigo students, with former Dirigo business teacher, Jane Mickeriz, as the instructor. This program is also housed at MVHS. The initial program runs for one-semester only, but beginning in January will become a full-year course of study. Core courses include: computer applications, communications for the world of work, accounting, notetaking, machine transcription and office procedures. An office technology program has been in operation at Telstar Regional High School since September of 1992.

According to both instructors, "Being housed at MVHS provides NOVA the opportunity to expand course offerings for business students. We are integrating studies within our programs whenever possible, and by doing so are able to provide the students with a broader business curriculum."

Project Goodstart
By BARBARA RADMORE

One of the hardest decisions any student has to make is to decide what they want to do after they leave school. When a student has a disability, this becomes extra difficult because there are often added obstacles in their way. Schools, as is required by Federal law, have a special process to assist special needs students to set future goals, called transition planning. In this process, teachers, students, parents and involved community agencies sit down together to map out a plan of what steps are needed for the student to reach their goals. It also determines what support the student needs and who should provide it.

To assist with this process NOVA has been awarded a $50,000 grant by Maine's Council on Transition, through its Federal School-to-Community Transition Systems Change Project for Youth with Disabilities. The main focus of this grant, titled Project Goodstart, is to provide special needs students with more information about themselves, to be able to set realistic goals for the future. It will also provide interested schools with a process by which this information could be best used in a broad-based transition-planning process.

Project Goodstart will provide three major services to the area schools. It will write and give each school a one-semester course that will help students develop strong decision-making, goal-setting and self-awareness skills. It will provide a similar curriculum for the adult education programs for their students. The third focus of the grant is to set up a vocational assessment center for the Vocational Region 9. This center will provide a variety of ways students can discover their interests, aptitudes, and abilities.

These grant goals will provide special-needs students, their parents and the school with the information needed to create successful future transition goals. Students will understand themselves, their needs and goals better, so will be a strong voice in deciding their own future.

Students will have a portfolio of information to provide the rest of their transition-planning team so that they can assist students to reach their goals in the best way possible.

Project Goodstart has hired Barbara Radmore to be the project coordinator. Barbara previously worked in this area as project coordinator of Project Rural Workplace, the workplace literacy project. She will be assisted by an advisory committee made up of representatives of area schools, community agencies, parents and students. This committee will ensure that all inter-

Community Service

Each year several NOVA programs get the opportunity to become involved in school and community projects. These projects draw upon the skills learned in the specific programs. This fall three programs have already been involved in projects and a fourth project is planned during the month of October.

The forestry program has been involved with SAD43 on two projects. One at the Rumford Elementary School clearing the wooded area between the school and the Armory in order for work to continue on the new playground.
The second project in cooperation with Mrs. Morton, guidance counselor at Mountain Valley Middle School, and Boise Cascade the class provided a career awareness session for the eighth-grade science class at Bunker Pond; maybe you saw them on Channel 13 news.

The building trades program has been constructing a tractor storage shed at the Mountain Valley Middle School. They have also completed shelving and a floor in a storage shed for the HeadStart program located at the Chisholm School.

The metal trades program has been able to use their skills to design and fabricate univent covers for Mountain Valley High School.

In the upcoming month the Allied Health/CNA program will be working with Rumford Community Hospital on a community awareness program.

By working on community projects the NOVA students are able to apply their practical skills to real situations. During the course of any year the NOVA programs are asked to do many more community projects than we can find time for,
but we are always open to listening to new project plans. If you are aware of a community project that you wish NOVA to review, please submit your proposal to Dewaine
Craig, Director, NOVA - Region 9,
32 Parker Street, Mexico, ME
04257.

Community Computer Lab

By CATHY NEWELL

The Community Computer Lab, located at the Adult Learning Center on Philbrook Street in Bethel, has been a busy place since it was opened in the spring of 1993. The lab was funded by a generous grant from The Betterment Fund created by the Will of William Bingham II, a former resident of Bethel. Additional support for software acquisition was obtained through a Carl
Perkins' grant from Central Maine
Technical College.

More than 200 individuals have participated in 26 courses at the lab, ranging from the very basic introduction to computers to a menu of more advanced courses in DOS, Windows, and Word Perfect. This fall Brenda Eastman, Lois Ruff and Amy Forbes are teaching courses sponsored by Adult Education. In addition, adults enrolled in the academic skills program at the Adult Learning Center, and youths enrolled in Mountain Valley Train-ing's Summer Youth Employment program have used the lab to enhance reading, writing and math

LEARNING CENTER TOUCH UP--The Adult Learning Center is getting a face lift with a little help from its friends. Stain and related supplies were purchased from The Betterment Fund grant, and throughout the summer groups of Outward Bound participants have performed community service work on the building. Four work groups of high-school-aged youth volunteered during July and August, spending 16 hours scraping the exterior, and also sorting and hanging clothes in the District Exchange. On Sept. 17, a Dynamite group of 30 college-aged youth doing a two-week Outward Bound course spent the day finishing the scraping, doing some shingle replacement and some yard work. Unfortunately, rain interfered with the actual staining. Plans are in progress for completing the job. John Starr of the Leon L. Bean Center of Outward Bound is the coordinator for the organization's community service work.

skills. The lab is open for independent use on Tuesday evenings,
Wednesday afternoons and Saturday mornings. Pauline Mills is the new lab assistant, taking over for Gert Friel, who has moved on to employment at Sunday River Ski Resort. To date the lab time has been used mostly for practice on Mavis Beacon Teaches Typing, a popular software program. The charge for lab time is $2 per hour;
use of the lab is restricted to those who have completed an introductory course or who have demonstrated the ability to work independently.

The lab features eight IBM-compatible machines, a CD-ROM, a dot matrix printer and a laser printer. In addition the Adult Learning Center classroom is equipped with three additional computers allowing learning center academic skills students to use technology during times that the lab is used for computer classes.

The academic skills instructors,
Lee Dolleman and Jeanette Baldrige, are deeply committed to the use of technology in their teaching. Word Perfect is used by all learning center students in writing enhancement classes, and a variety of software programs provide instruction in math and reading. Ms.
Baldrige also uses the lab with this fall's popular fiction writing course.

Workplace Grant Updates

Project Rural Workplace, the two-year federally-funded National Workplace Literacy project involving the Adult Education programs in central and northern Oxford County, came to an end on June 30. The grand finale for the $200,000 project was a presentation at the National Adult Basic Education conference in New Orleans in June. The panel presentation was coordinated by Cathy Newell of the SAD44 Adult Education program, and featured segments by Project Coordinator Barbara Radmore, Worksite Instructor Pat Littlefield of the Oxford Hills and Mechanic Falls programs, and Lois Ruff of Bethel Furniture Stock representing the employers' point of view. A 15-minute video featuring footage of the classes conducted at Bethel Furniture Stock and Sunday River Ski Resort, as well as remarks by Tim McIntyre of Bethel Furniture Stock and Clayton Blood, who served as literacy facilitator for the project, was shown.

Project Rural Workplace was evaluated by a third party evaluator, New England Partners. The evaluation report noted that a total of 34 programs were offered at 16 businesses, with a total of 678 participants. The size of businesses ranged from several with less than 20 employees to Boise with 1800. They found that "the projects that worked best were strongly supported by management or line supervisors, and that some of the most important 'spin-offs' from the project were the development of more responsibility, self-esteem, worker confidence, and recognition that employees could learn." Some of the documented changes in employee behavior were reduction in absenteeism, reduction in turnover, improved communication, better relations between employees and supervisors, enrollment in further education, completion of GED, and demonstration of leadership.

A Workplace Forum was held at the Rest-Inn Conference Center in August, co-sponsored by NOVA and SAD44, to share findings from the grant, and to assess interest on the part of adult education programs and employers in submitting an application to the Department of Education for the coming grant cycle which will feature three-year projects. The forum demonstrated that in northern Oxford and Franklin counties there is keen interest on the part of a variety of employers and from all adult education providers. Cathy Newell of SAD44 and Cynthia Tanous of NOVA will coordinate the preparation of the application in conjunction with an advisory group of employers who are committed to project involvement, should the application be successful. Applications are due in January with notification expected in late spring. The new application will build on the strengths and weaknesses of Project Rural Workplace and will focus on communication skills and problem solving which were initially identified by employers as the area of greatest need. Employers are currently undertaking needs assessments to provide corroborating data.

Parenting Class

By CATHY NEWELL

Parenting for Prevention: Rodney Abbott piloted this course last year to great reviews from the 12 parents participating. The course is for individuals, parents and others, who want to learn how to create an atmosphere in which the use of alcohol and other drugs by young people is less likely to take place. The seven-week course will be offered again this fall, beginning on Oct. 25, on Monday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. at Telstar High School. The course is designed as a prevention course; however, its topics are helpful for anyone who wants to learn more about using positive discipline and encouraging personal responsibility and self-esteem. The sessions include: empowering vs. enabling, a job description for parents, life skills for building self-esteem, life skills for positive relationships, and alcohol and other drugs. The format for the course includes opportunity for discussion. To sign up for the course, call 824-2780.

Mr. Abbott is interested in developing a group of facilitators who would be willing to offer the course in their own towns or neighborhoods. He is the chemical health coordinator for SAD44 and may be reached at Telstar, 824-2136.

Other Parenting Skills Training:

Children and Parents: This monthly program is sponsored by the Bethel Library and provides a discussion group for parents facilitated by Lorrie Hoch and a story hour with Betsy Raymond for children of parents attending the discussion group. The children and parents program will be held on the first Monday of each month from 10 to 11 a.m. There is no charge for the program.

STEP; Systematic Training for Effective Parenting: This is a nationally-known and highly-respected parenting skills curriculum, with versions for parents of pre-school, school-age or teenage children. Adult Education offers the courses whenever a group of eight adults requests them, as well as advertising the courses through the regular schedule. According to facilitator Lorrie Hoch and Cathy Newell of the Adult Education program, the reaction to the STEP class is always positive.

Even Start

By NANCY MURPHY, COORDINATOR

The Northern Oxford County Even Start Project is starting their second year of a four-year Literacy Grant. The NOVA Adult and Community Education Program in conjunction with the Literacy Volunteers of the Greater Rumford area will continue to implement a family-centered literacy program in Northern Oxford County.

This project allows 15 eligible families living in Bethel, Canton, Dixfield, Mexico, Rumford, and Peru to participate in activities designed to promote literacy, train adults to support the educational growth of their children and prepare children for success in regular school programs. Families that participate in the project will receive approximately four hours of instruction per week. The first year of the Even Start Project has been very successful.

An eligible family must have at least one child between ages of birth and seven residing in a Chapter I elementary attendance area (Bethel, Canton, Dixfield, Mexico, Rumford and Peru) one of whose parents reads or computes at or below a grade eight level and/or lacks a high school credential.

The Northern Oxford County Even Start Project is presently serving 12 families. Seven of the families live in the Rumford area and the other five families are from the Bethel area. We are in the process of contacting families that have been referred. It will not be long before we are serving our maximum 15 families. Even Start appears to be a focal point in many of our clients' lives.

Our project has 22 adults participating in parent meetings, field trips, and potluck suppers. We have 12 targeted adults. An adult education instructor goes into the home to do GED or diploma prep work. Two of our families bring two languages other than English to our project, Chinese and Khmer.

Our families have a total of 31 children, ranging in ages from age 2 to age 19. The target child in each family receives instruction from the early childhood/primary instructor; however, all children at home may participate in the activities. The early childhood/primary instructor includes the parent for a segment of each session.

The Northern Oxford County Even Start staff is very proud of our families that have participated in the publishing of our newsletter, "News From Home." The third edition will be released soon. Also many of our participating adults are becoming more literate in computers. Both adult instructors encourage their students to write and edit their articles for "News From Home" on the computer. They also use many other programs when working with the adults. The adults really enjoy their computer time. The use of computers within our program is a definite PLUS.

In June we traveled to Glen, N.H., for an unforgettable visit to Storyland. It was a perfect day. The sun was shining and the park was not very crowded. This was the first time all of our families came together. Many new friendships yielded fond memories. All of our families will come together again on our next field trip to Smiling Hill Farm in Westbrook. We will have a picnic lunch, take a wagon ride, and tour the barnyard. On our way home we will stop to pick apples.

EXPLORATIONS ON THE MOVE--Telstar middle schooler Sam Sayen works with Explorations art teacher Arla Patch in the Telstar area.

Explorations Program has New Home

By BRUCE A. BELL

Most of the general public is well aware of the move of CPS students to the Telstar complex for the 1993-94 school year. Few are aware that Arla Patch's art explorations program has also moved to Telstar. Arla and her middle-level students are presently using the high school art area on Friday afternoons from 2:30 to 4 p.m.

Explorations is an after-school visual arts program for grades one through 12. Since it began in 1991, 100 students have enrolled in the program to date. Many of the students who attend the program have received scholarships from Bethel and community sponsors. Ninety scholarships have been granted thus far.

Currently enrolled in the middle-level program are: Gail Aloisio, Sarah Marshall, Tony Merrill, Kate Nickerson, Brandon Palmer, Emily Parsons, Sara Paul, Per Sandstrom, Sam Sayen, and Anna Sysko.

Many of the students who have participated in a program which is based on creating art builds self-esteem.

Understanding the creative process helps develop decision making. Students learn to apply creativity to the rest of their lives.

They develop an appreciation of beauty.

They develop social skills.

They develop an appreciation of the difference in people.

They learn to express feelings.

By BRUCE A. BELL

The Middle School staff has been reviewing strategies to improve communication between Middle School parents, staff and students. There are many issues which relate to improving communication, but at the present time one issue seems to be a priority. Parents have been asking teachers to provide specific progress reports for individual students beyond the scope of our present report card/mid-term warning system which is presently in place. In order to better respond to student needs and parental requests for information, we are going to increase the number of reporting periods from four to five for the 1993-94 school year.

The staff has reviewed our present system and has made the decision to provide a more appropriate reporting system for middle-level students. There are a number of very good reasons for making this change. Some of the more important reasons follow:

--Vacations and holiday breaks interrupt the present ranking periods.

--The present second ranking period spans three months; two school vacations; and one holiday weekend.

--The present ranking periods cover 10 to 11 calendar weeks.

--There has been a long-standing parental concern expressed about the lack of frequent communication, particularly with regard to student progress.

--This age group needs more immediate feedback on their academic progress. Ten weeks is too long.

--There is a large number of parents presently requesting more frequent reports of student progress. In the face of these concerns, it seems appropriate to shorten our present ranking periods from ten to seven weeks and increase the number of ranking periods from four to five.

The Middle School will continue to maintain our present mid-term warning system. This will mean that both students and parents could receive a progress report about once per month.

During the 1993-94 school year we will pilot this effort and evaluate the results, applying this information to a more comprehensive review of our progress reporting system for the 1994-95 school year. Under this new system, the rank periods for the Middle School would close:

--First ranking period - Oct. 22

--Second ranking period - Dec. 22

--Third ranking period - Feb. 18

--Fourth ranking period - Apr. 15

--Fifth ranking period - June 9

We believe this change is beneficial for students, teachers and parents. We believe that more frequent report cards will produce fewer failures, while at the same time allow parents to have a clearer idea of how their students are doing. We hope this change will also reduce sports ineligibility issues for students. The staff favors this change and believes that more immediate feedback to students and parents will benefit everyone.

They find a new "voice" through art.

Medical Specialists Working With Primary Care Physicians in Rumford

There have been major changes and improvements in the way medical care is being brought to you in the Rumford area. This story is about one of those improvements: how medical specialists are traveling to Rumford on a regular basis to work with primary care physicians here. It's all part of an effort to make sure you get the best medical treatment possible right in your home town.

Not so long ago, community hospitals, like Rumford Community Hospital, were little "islands" of health care. They were only remotely medically-connected to other community hospitals — similar "islands" of health care. Each "island" had its own in-house medical staff managing most of the medical cases, except for those cases calling for very complex treatment.

And in those cases, patients were sent "away," to a medical specialist located in another larger "island" of health care — Central Maine Medical Center in Lewiston, for example, for the medical treatment they needed.

All of this was done at great, though necessary, inconvenience to the patient. Such a patient might have to take time off from work, make transportation arrangements, lose pay and otherwise make big changes to his or her daily schedule. It was a way of life accepted grudgingly by those who needed advanced and specialized medical care. That's the way things were done, so why whine about it?

Now, there's been a recent change to that way of life. It's a change few people would have believed could happen as quickly as it did, or even happen at all! The community medical "islands" have begun to share medical staff and expertise for the benefit of patients.

Specialists Available Here

How has that change been reflected? Since 1990, many patients who might have had to travel to Central Maine Medical Center for needed specialized medical care, can get the same treatment in Rumford on a regular basis. They continue their treatment with their own primary care physicians who can now, when the medical situation demands, make a local appointment with a medical specialist who has office hours right here in Rumford. The

Dr. Michael Parker, urologist, discusses clinic schedule with Patti Christie, R.N.

Dr. Michael Lemieux, cardiologist, sees cardiac patients at Rumford Community Hospital.

You Want To See A Medical Specialist? Here's The Best Way

The best way to see a medical specialist — to "access the system" in medical jargon, is to work with your primary care physician. As Dr. Emily Bray notes in another article in this month's PULSE, it's much better to work with your own physician so that there is continuity in your medical care. Your own physician can consult with the medical specialist, and between the two of them, they can determine the best overall medical treatment for your particular situation. You CAN self-refer, but that's a little trickier, and you might save money, time, aggravation and energy by working with your own physician first.

highly specialized medical care now locally available includes cardiology, neurology, gastroenterology, dermatology, and ear, nose and throat. Patients previously used to have to travel to Lewiston or Portland to obtain these same medical services.

These medical specialists work on a referral basis with the patient's primary care physician, although individuals may contact the specialist directly for an appointment if they desire.

Dr. Emily Bray was one of the area primary care physicians who worked hard to get the medical specialists to come to the Rumford area. She remembers what it was like before the medical specialists brought their specialties to Rumford: "One of my concerns then was that some of the medical specialty services were far away for many local patients. That created substantial barriers, especially for the elderly. In addition,

For Your Information

by John Welsh, Jr., President,
Rumford Community Hospital

One of the major ways hospitals, including Rumford Community Hospital, have changed in recent years is in the increased amount of networking and sharing of resources they have developed among themselves. For example, Deborah Whitworth has been recently appointed Human Resources Manager for Rumford Community Hospital, Rumford Community Family Health, Rumford Community Home and Northern Cumberland Memorial Hospital in Bridgton. This is an example of job sharing — one person working with several facilities.

Editor's Note

We try to have some sort of theme in each issue of the PULSE but we don't always do that successfully. For example, we've wanted to do an issue devoted to our medical specialists for some time now, but before now the story just didn't 'fall together' as they say. Finally, in this issue, we think we were able to do it—we've pretty well developed a single theme with the medical specialty stories. The availability of medical specialists in the local area has really taken off in recent years as more and more medical specialists have opened offices in Rumford to make it more convenient for you to see them. Now, you don't have to take as much time off work or travel to Lewiston to see a medical specialist, so it is more convenient and practical for you to see a specialist.

We thought it might be useful to also run a little article which sort of defines each medical specialty, so that you'd get a sense of the kinds of medical problems these specialists work in—that's in our 'What's What and Who's Who' article.

We want to thank our photographer Lainie Cross for her photos of the specialists, and for all those who helped us put the issue together. At any rate, we hope you enjoy the issue. It was fun putting it together.

There are other examples of equipment sharing and the sharing of medical staff and specialists. In this issue of the PULSE, we are highlighting the medical specialists you can access right here in Rumford. These visiting medical specialists have office hours in Rumford and represent a wide variety of medical specialties you or members of your family may need from time to time. Now, instead of having to take the time off work and travel to Lewiston, you can make an appointment by calling the telephone number of the specialist listed in the "What's What and Who's Who" story of this month's PULSE. You can see the specialist right in Rumford, and receive excellent service on the spot. The specialties now available in the local area include Cardiology, Ear, Eyes and Throat, Ophthalmology, Optometry, Neurology, Podiatry, Orthopedics, Urology, Dermatology and Gastroenterology.

As these examples of networking expand, and they will, rural hospitals like Rumford Community Hospital will be able to make use of highly specialized medical equipment, experienced medical specialists and other services which an individual hospital probably couldn't afford by itself. It's a way of managing costs and, at the same time, making sure you get the best treatment possible when you need it. And we think that it's the kind of sharing and networking that the Clinton Administration's Health Care Plan will be suggesting in the near future.

If you have suggestions about other ways we can share resources and network with other area hospitals, give me a call at 364-4581, and let me know!

Medical Specialists... (Continued from page 1)

there was the extra time off the job for people who were working. And a lot of the elderly depend on working people to get them to their appointments as well.

"I was very supportive of having these services brought into town. Now, a neurologist, for example, can treat people who are outpatients here, and once in a while consult with people who are at Rumford Community Hospital when they come up on their scheduled days. Sometimes having the specialists here can save a more acute patient a trip down to Lewiston.

"I use them to solve more complicated problems," she notes. "It provides a good service for us."

There are other advantages in having the medical specialists here on-site to work with primary care physicians. "These specialists are people you see face-to-face," she says, "and that makes the communication and problem solving process for the patient's treatment easier than by letter or by phone."

She noted there are conveniences for patients, as well. "Having a prep for GI work-up is quite an ordeal to go through. To go through that ordeal at the same time you have to drive to Lewiston is very difficult. So having the gastroenterologist here is Rumford makes it a lot more convenient for those undergoing the gastroenterology work-ups."

Work With Primary Care Physicians

The best way, though not the only way, to see one of the medical specialists coming to Rumford is through a referral with your primary care physician. Dr. Bray explains that "it makes much better continuity of care if a person is referred to the medical specialists by their own primary care doctor who knows about the patient and can be focused about the referral.

"There are times when a self-referral is appropriate, but there are also times when a primary care physician can save the patient some expense if it turns out that what the patient thinks is going on is NOT going on," she says. "For instance, sometimes what a patient may think is heartburn, is really cardiac pain. For the patient to self-refer may get them on the wrong track early. You can save money, time, effort and pain by going to your primary care doctor first."

Local Staff Lists Needs

The delivery of specialized medical health care to the Rum-ford area is the direct result of the affiliation Rumford has with the Central Maine Medical Center. Don Leaver, vice president of the Central Maine Medical Center, remembers those early days of the management affiliation in 1987:

"Early on, President William W. Young, Jr. of Central Maine Healthcare Corporation and Central Maine Medical Center, and Vice President Peter Chalke interviewed all of the members of the medical staff in Rumford. They asked the staff to identify what additional medical assistance they needed for Rumford Community Hospital.

"The staff then came up with the list of medical specialists they wanted to see have regular clinics at Rumford Community Hospital or offer specialized medical services for patients in the Rumford area," he said.

Running Out Of Juice!

The Truth About Steroids

by Melinda Montgomery, Program Director, S.A.S.

We all want the perfect body. Americans' quest for the ultimate physique has given birth to a multi-billion dollar industry. Every week there seems to be another diet or exercise gadget that guarantees you'll be in great shape in less time and with less effort. (C'mon, admit it, most of us have a thigh-slimmer or a box of thin-shakes tucked away somewhere, gathering dust). The point is, we're all attracted to something that promises we'll look better, faster, and easier.

For the most part, get-fit-quick schemes, though costly, are harmless. However, one exercise supplement showing up in neighborhood gyms is far from harmless — it can be life threatening. I'm talking about anabolic steroids, often referred to as "juice."

What Are Steroids?

Steroids are derived from hormones. Anabolic steroids are one group of hormonal drugs.

Medically, the United States Food and Drug Administration has approved some steroids for the treatment of some anemias, breast cancers, osteoporosis, endometriosis, and hereditary angioedema, a disease which involves the swelling of some parts of the body.

Steroids, specifically anabolic steroids, have received its most publicity lately, though, for its illegal use as "performance enhancers." Because they are man-made forms of testosterone, a natural male hormone, they help grow muscles, bones and skin.

There is no conclusive research that proves steroids actually help athletes perform better.

Now you're probably saying that testosterone is responsible for giving a man masculine traits, such as a deeper voice and facial hair, so steroids just offer a guy more of a good thing, right? W-R-O-N-G! Here's why: Steroid use can cause the male reproductive system to shut down, resulting in the development of some undesirable (and unmasculine) physical side effects. Here's a few — shrinking of the testicles, reduced sperm count, impotence, baldness, difficulty and pain in urinating, development of breasts, and enlarged prostate.

For women, the added testosterone has the opposite effect — growth of facial hair, menstrual cycle may change or stop altogether, enlargement of the clitoris, deepening of the voice, and breast reduction.

In both sexes, the added testosterone causes — reduction in HDL,

Melinda Montgomery

the "good" cholesterol; high blood pressure; liver damage or cancers; joint problems and increased risk of injury; in adolescents, steroid use can irreversibly halt growth and ... whenever there is substance abuse involving shared needles, there is also the risk of contracting HIV, which can result in a person developing the AIDS virus.

Psychological Effects?

While many athletes report feeling good about themselves while using steroids, others are reporting extreme mood swings, ranging from severe, even suicidal, depression to violent, sometimes homicidal, feelings of aggression which have become so common they are referred to as "roid rages."

Another Addictive Drug

Researchers at Yale University have concluded that long-term use of steroids can result in cravings and difficulty discontinuing the drug, both are classic signs of addiction.

So it remains, the only safe and effective way to get and stay in shape is through moderate diet and exercise. (By the way, does anyone want to buy a slightly used abdominal-cruncher?)

Weight Training

by Kathy Gendron, Fitness Specialist

Would you like to improve your posture, personal appearance and self-image, then perhaps you should consider weight training. Not only will lifting weights improve and increase both your muscular strength and endurance, which is needed for the performance of many daily activities (ie. walking, sitting or carrying objects), but it will also increase your flexibility and decrease your chance for injuries. Other benefits include a decrease in total and relative body fat and an increase in fat-free weight (muscle mass).

Women should not worry about "bulking up" with weight training, because women lack a significant level of the hormone testosterone that is found in much higher levels in normal males. This hormone allows for the increase in muscle size that is seen in many male weight lifters.

What Is Strength And Endurance?

Strength: Is the ability of a muscle or muscle group to exert maximum force against resistance.

Endurance: Is the ability of a muscle or muscle group to exert submaximum force repeatedly over a period of time.

There are many basic principles associated with a weight training program. Each of the following are needed in order for strength improvements to occur:

1. Overload Principle: The muscle needs to be exercised against

Just for Kids

INTRODUCING KC!
She cares for kids.

Dear K.C.,

My grandmother is a patient in the hospital quite often. I am 11 years old and my mother thinks that is old enough to visit the hospital. I love my grandma and I like to spend time with her when she feels good but I get nervous about visiting her in the hospital. My grandma is not herself when she is sick. We can't play games or do anything we do when she is home.

Sometimes I would rather not go to the hospital. What should I do?

Your friend,
Terry

Dear Terry,

Feeling uneasy and even frightened in the hospital surrounding is very common. The unfamiliar sights, sounds and smells of illness and medical equipment can overwhelm your senses. The entire hospital experience may leave a visitor feeling nervous, afraid, sad and confused. Fortunately, there are things a person can do to make hospital visits easier and more meaningful for the patient and visitor.

Here are some ideas that you may find helpful next time you visit:

1. Get prepared for the visit. Ask a lot of questions. You need to find out ahead of time how ill your grandmother is. Is she awake? Can she talk? Can she get out of bed? Can you touch her, kiss her, etc. If your parents can't answer these questions, ask one of the caregivers. Nurses and other hospital personnel are there to help you as well as your Grandmother.

2. Plan to keep your visit brief. If your Grandmother is feeling up to longer visits and asks you to stay longer, then stay. It is easier for a patient to ask for a longer visit than to ask you to leave.

3. Even though you can't play games and be as active as usual, your Grandmother may still enjoy chatting and maybe even story-telling. You may ask her, "Do you feel up to telling me a story?" If she does, you may both be surprised at how good this kind of sharing makes you feel. Ask your Grandma to tell you a story about her life. Maybe she would tell you a story about the naughtiest thing she did as a child or her most embarrassing moment in school. You may both get a good laugh and laughter is always good medicine. Wouldn't you feel good if your sick loved-one had a nice laugh during your visit? You could really feel like you helped her.

Sincerely,
K.C.

The idea of medical specialists coming to the Rumford area wasn't completely new at the time, but it was limited. There was already some specialty care going on prior to those interviews — ophthalmology and urology, for example. And Dr. David Greenleaf, orthopedist, was already in practice as a shared physician with Norway.

Leaver described the first steps to come out of the interviews with the physicians in Rumford. "A neurologist, Dr. John Belden, was the first to get involved. Next came cardiology with Dr. Michael Lemieux. At this time, the hospital also purchased echo-cardiogram equipment so Dr. Lemieux could do echo-cardiograms in Rumford using the local staff.

"The gastroenterology clinic began late last year with Dr. Philip O'Connor's group. The ENT clinic with Dr. Frederick Holter's group was also done within the last year.

"One of the interesting developments," he notes, "was the radiology relationship where the radiology staff is shared between Northern Cumberland, CMMC and Rumford Community Hospital. That happened when Rumford Community Hospital needed additional radiology coverage and they were going out to recruit a radiologist. We approached our radiologists at CMMC and asked them to help us develop a regional network and they took responsibility for staffing the radiology department."

Central Maine Medical Center and Central Maine Healthcare Corporation supports the medical specialist program at Rumford by being the communicator of the medical needs of Rumford to the medical staff at Central Maine Medical Center. Says Leaver, "We would also recruit for a medical specialist that's been identified as a need in the region. For example, we are recruiting right now for a medical oncologist/hematologist we hope would include Rumford as part of their clinic responsibilities. That was identified as a need by the medical staff there, but we don't have the staff right now in place at Central Maine Medical Center, so we are actively recruiting.

"By next summer we hope to be able to offer a weekly oncology clinic in Rumford. That includes a lot of training of the nursing staff to do chemotherapy when the doctor's not there. This is part of one of our major goals — to have a regional cancer program.

"I see a number of new clinics in Rumford in the future," he said, "including oncology, dermatology, (which has just started with Dr. Pierre LaChance), rheumatology, and occupational medicine."

Regionalizing Is Catching On

Regionalizing is rapidly catching on in Maine. Five area hospitals are already discussing regionalized medical support. The support includes shared medical specialists and clinic arrangements, shared equipment and educational opportunities for staff and other benefits. The hospitals are: Franklin Memorial in Farmington, Stephens Memorial in Norway, Northern Cumberland in Bridgton, CMMC in Lewiston, and Rumford Community Hospital.

So how are patients reacting to this new development in medical care delivery? Surveys show that patients in rural areas want to be able to go to one place for their medical treatment, the local hospital.

If they go outside their community for their medical treatment, they tend not to come back. If they start going outside for special medical treatment, then they continue to go outside the community. If you can bring the medical specialist to the community, the patient receives the specialty medical care and stays with the local primary care doctor as well.

Leaver agrees with Dr. Bray and says that the best way for people to learn about the specialty care physicians is to talk to their primary care doctor. "They should have confidence in the local medical community," he says. "The access to the specialist should be through the primary care physician in the community, though people can still go to a specialist on their own."

It's all an example of how the world of medical care is changing as hospitals try to cut costs, maximize the availability of health care to all, and prepare for the future, as the state and federal governments prepare to announce more details of their health care plans. We are well positioned to respond to the demands of the furesistances that exceed those normally encountered.

2. Progression: The demands placed on the muscle must be systematically and progressively increased over a period of time.

3. Specificity: Strength development is specific not only to the muscle groups that are exercised but also to the movement patterns they produce.

4. Order of Exercises: Exercises should be arranged so that the larger muscle groups are exercised before the smaller ones. Also, no two successive exercises or lifts should involve the same muscle group.

When constructing a weight resistance program, the following principles also need to be considered:

1. Mode of Training.

A. Isometric or static training refers to a muscular contraction producing little or no movement, such as pushing or pulling against immovable objects.

B. Isotonic or dynamic training refers to a muscular contraction with movement. Isotonic training programs can be conducted without weights or with free weights (bar bells and dumb bells), fixed resistance machines, variable resistance machines and isokinetic equipment. When performing isotonic exercises, a constant resistance (weight) is moved through a joint's full range of motion.

C. Isokinetic and variable resistance training keeps the speed of the muscular contraction constant, because the machine provides an accommodating resistance to match the user's force through the range of motion. These training programs require the use of special machines equipped with mechanical devices that provide a variable resistance, with the intent of overloading the muscle group maximally through the entire range of motion.

2. Resistance.

A. Refers to the amount of weight lifted.

3. Sets/Repetitions.

A. A set in strength training is defined as the number of repetitions performed for a given exercise. For example, a person lifting 40 pounds, 10 times, has performed one set of 10 repetitions. The number of sets recommended for optimum development can vary from three to five sets with one minute or more of recovery time between each set.

4. Frequency Of Training.

A. Should be done three times per week for a total body workout or more frequently if a split-body routine (upper body one day and lower body the next) is used.

B. Following a maximum workout, rest the muscles for about 48 hours to allow adequate recovery.

5. Duration.

A. Allow a minimum of six weeks of consecutive training in order to achieve significant strength gains.

6. Strength vs. Endurance.

A. A high-resistance, low-repetitions programs results in increases in both strength and endurance.

B. Both a medium-resistance, medium repetitions and a low-resistance, high repetitions program result in a greater gain in endurance than in strength.

Enjoy your weight lifting experience and stay healthy!

ER Staff Early Example of Benefits of Sharing

The emergency physician network now in existence at five area hospitals is an example of the benefits of sharing staff and the value of pooling resources to improve service for patients.

Through the network of five hospitals, we have been able to recruit highly qualified board certified physicians who are especially trained in emergency medicine. Rumford and Bridgton were the pioneers in starting that shared ER staffing relationship with CMMC. The program has grown to include Stephens Memorial in Norway and Parkview Hospital in Brunswick as well. We have about a dozen board certified emergency physicians on staff. They like the rural setting, support staff, the professional and educational opportunities of being part of a large network.
